It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. FAST WHEELING.

The Coaching Club's Return from Philadelphia.

GREAT SUCCESS OF THE TRIP

One Hundred Miles in Eleven Hours and Forty-nine Minutes.

FAIR WEATHER AND VARIABLE ROADS.

Gay and Exhilarating Scenes Along the Route.

THE GREETING IN NEW YORK

"Good morning," said Mr. Frederic Bronson, of the Coaching Club, looking at his watch. The Secretary and Treasurer was fresh, radiant and satisfied. Time, 5 A. M. yesterday; place, the office of the St. George Hotel, Broad and Walnut streets, Philadelphia.

"Fine prospect," continued Mr. Bronson, waving his hand toward the open doors, through which came volumes of fresh, invigorating air. Then turning to the person in charge of the hotel, Mr. Bronson asked about certain orders given the night before, and then again went up stairs.

"Breakfast," announced a servant at 5:20 A. M., and three minutes afterward the twelve members of the visiting coaching party sat down to that meal. The business of the day upon which the Tally Ho had selected to return to New York had commenced. Evidently each of the gentlemen enjoyed the trip, the hospitality of the Philadelphians being repeatedly referred to in the warmest terms. At 5:45 A. M., fifteen minutes before the fixed hour of departure, the coaching luggage was piled up near the hotel entrance. All the members were gathered in the office, and "goodbys" were being said, when a young man stepped quickly up to Mr. Bronson and said, "May I take a picture of the coach?" "No objection," responded the latter, "but don't detain us." Five minutes more and the Tally Ho, winding around the corner of Walnut street, drew up in front of the St. George. Jersey dust and Pennsylvania mud had been washed from its canary panels, and the old sporting dash hung about the carriage. Quickly places were taken. Mr. Fairman Rogers, the Philadelphia member, on the bench, with Mr. H. O. Fritsch in the box seat, then Colonel De Lancey, Mr. Perry Belment, Mr. Frederic Bronson and Mr. Frederick Neilson on the first row. To their backs were Mr. F. R. Rives, Mr. Theo. A. Havemeyer, Commodore Kane, N.Y.Y.C., and Mr. G. P. Wetmore. On the rear seats were Mr. George R. Fearing, Mr. J. V. Parker and Fownes, the guard. It was within two minutes of the starting hour. Broad street had suddenly become black with humanity. Where ten minutes before were only five or six stalwart policemen, now swayed to and fro several hundred citizens. Many carriages and several gentlemen and two or three ladies on horseback also suddenly came upon the scene. "Be quick" was the word sent to the photographer. He was quick, indeed, for in a few seconds he announced that he was through. "That's the fourth 'photo' of the trip:" said Mr. Belmont.

LEAVING PHILADELPHIA.

Then, with the smiling Fownes in his place and the lads at the heads of the leaders, Mr. Rogers shouted "Right!" and the Tally Ho went bounding away, homeward bound. How the guard made the spacious street ring with the strains of the horn! How the men on the sidewalks whirled their hats and the ladies their handkerchiefs! The "goodby" was pleasant and hearty, the morning lovely and the air life-giving. Steadily up Broad street, around the public buildings into Filbert, and then again into Broad, the drag bounded over the stones. Behind it were the gentlemen and ladies on horseback seen at the St. George, with eight or ten carriages and the Chief Engineer of the Philadelphia Fire Department in his official wagon. In that beautiful section of the city, early as was the hour, there were scores on each square, and at Ridge avenue, passed within eight minutes, forty or fifty workingmen and children were in one group. Hearty cheers came from this party and every hat on the Tally Ho, excepting that of the coachman, was raised in response. The Forest mansion, half a minute or so later, was rattled by. Then Columbia avenue was passed and "The Old Bunch Bowl," the oldest house on Philadelphia's favorite driving road, was soon placed astern. Crowds of greater or less dimensions stood on every corner, and from several of the stately mansions flags were displayed.

THROUGH THE SUBURBS.

Precisely at 6:25 Nicetown lane was turned into, where the carriages that accompanied the drag out of the city turned back, as did the party on horseback. The lane was not found to be so muddy as had been anticipated from the rain of Sunday, and the team doing their duty, the time points were most satisfactorily made. At 6:45 the Tally Ho left Nicetown lane and shot into Powder Mill lane, where the air was fragrant with young spring blossoms. Swift by the handsome villas, gay with flowering shrubs and beautiful with trees in bloom, Frankford was entered at 6:50. Here the town was out of doors. From the mills at its lower end to the upper limits, the greeting of the residents was of the heartiest character. Men stood on the sidewalks, boys on fences and women on the stoops, all with one intent. The coaching party was greatly pleased.

"It's an old time send-off," said one. "Yes, and 'tis a pity the town isn't bigger," echoed another.

ON THE BRISTOL PIKE.

As the Bristol turnpike was turned into "Daddy" Campbell, one of the oldest living drivers of the once famous Union line of stages—New York to Philadelphia—stood in the street. Swinging a broom about his head, "Daddy" laughed immoderately, and his laughter became contagious, as the coaching party followed his example, and did not straighten their faces for an eighth of a mile. Cedar Hill Cemetery was reached at 6:58, and upon its green terrace several ladies in mourning were seen. They watched the drag until out of sight. In the doorways and on the lawns of the many pretty country seats—all owned by Philadelphia merchants—there were both ladies and gentlemen waiting for the Tally Ho, and in many instances flags were gracefully hung upon the fences. Nowhere was a coach more pleasantly welcomed. Near Holmesburg, from the yard of a farmhouse, there rushed with the occupants half a dozen dogs out into the road. One curly haired pet inspected the drag rather too closely, and getting bewildered between the wheelers' heels he was knocked under the coach and had his back broken.

"Ki-yi! ki-yi!" yelped the pet. "Oh, my!" cried its mistress, and the last seen of the poor cur by the coaching gentlemen was its being wrapped up in an apron and carried toward the house. "The only accident of the journey," said somebody from the top of the drag.

Soon the Forrest Home for aged actors, standing almost hidden by a grove of stately trees, was passed and then the residents of Holmesburg were met in large numbers. Two minutes more and the Washington House was reached. It was the end of the first stage; the time, 7h. 20m. 30s., just 14m. 30s. ahead of the hour scheduled. "A capital beginning," cried all hands. Mr. Rogers had sent his bays along for some purpose.

All was ready for the change. The horses were in their places, the traces hitched, and this time Mr. Fearing gathered up the reins and away the new team whirled toward Hulmeville. General Wayne's Hotel, an old structure, was passed at 7:31 A. M., and fifteen minutes more were sufficient to reach the Red Lion Inn. On and on the Tally-Ho rolled through a country of handsome farms, thrifty dwellings and vistas of groves and hills. At 7:51 Wells' Boarding School, with all the boys and girls near the roadside, was shot past, the boys cheering and the girls clapping their fair hands. The road was smooth and the going excellent. Here the coachman made a slight error in his route, as instead of taking the Milford road, to the left of the school house, he continued up the Bristol pike. The mistake was not discovered until too late to turn back, and though making the stage nearly two miles further than originally laid out, the beauty of the road compensated for the greater distance. Cornwell Station, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was passed at 7:56, Eddington at 8:03, and five minutes after Bridgewater was entered.

ALONG THE WINDING NESHAMINY.

Half a mile further the winding Neshaminy Creek was crossed, and from this point on its waters, made muddy by the recent rain, were kept in view. Along its bank are many elegant mansions, and the road good, though serpentine, with now and then a long hill was most of the way arched with trees of enormous growth and great age. The coach in this stretch excited universal admiration. While the people on the Milford road were disappointed the inhabitants of the villages above named were a little puzzled to see the handsome drag and its uniformed members, and as they looked on with astonishment they shouted and gave it a hearty reception. Through the quaint old village of Newport the greeting was very cheering. The coach was in sight of Hulmeville at 8:31, and nine minutes more of the pretty Neshaminy and a sweet breeze as of wild flowers and May buttercups, the clinking pace brought the coach to the end of the second homeward stage, the Worthington Hotel. Sharp 8:40, and five minutes ahead.

"A beautiful country this last stage," exclaimed Mr. Fearing, as he dropped the reins and jumped to the ground.

"Charming," responded Mr Havemeyer.

"Glad the mistake of roads was made," echoed three or four others.

Meanwhile the crowd cheered. How country crowds will sometimes cheer! Pennsylvania air seems especially favorable for country lungs, and the Hulmeville lungs did noble service in the way of receiving and sending the Tally Ho on its homeward mission.

"Thus far everything has worked magnificently," said Colonel Kane, with a merry twinkle in his eyes, "and if the balance of the way is as successful, it 'll be grand, won't it?"

MR. BRONSON WITH THE RIBBONS.

All this time the shifting of the horses was being done, and Mr. Bronson's team of three bays and a chestnut was as quickly and smartly in place as ever changing was accomplished in the palmiest days of coaching in old England. The near leader was somewhat nervous in the midst of the enthusiastic crowd, but the coachman shouted "Let them go," and with a jump on they went through a narrow passage between the hotel stoop and a large tree standing in the middle of the road—an ugly place for a coach and four, but nothing was touched, and, in fine spirits, Hulmeville's adieux were spoken, hats raised and a steep hill hard by ascended, on the way to the Delaware River and Trenton, in the land of Jersey. For a mile or so the drive was devoid of special excitement, but at the Middletown Cross Roads Hotel, as well as at two or three houses not far away, there were small groups, who waved flags and cheered the travellers. Passing one farmhouse, its owner was in the road and a large family behind him. Bunting was all over the whitewashed fence.

"Three cheers for the Tally Ho," cried the farmer, and the cheers were heartily given.

"Three cheers for Mr. Bronson," he cried again and there was the same lively response.

"Three more for Colonel Kane," he shouted once more, and, dutiful to the last, the farmer's wife and the bright-eyed girls and boys came nobly to the rescue. The Tallo Ho party will long remember this incident of the trip.

At 8:58 A. M., a fingerboard on the roadside gave the information that Trenton was seven miles beyond, and Philadelphia twenty-one miles behind. The country being passed through, famous old Bucks county, is highly cultivated and everywhere are evidences of industry and wealth. Falsington was at hand at 9:16 A. M., and nine minutes later another finger board made the distance to the Trenton City Bridge just two miles. "There's old Trenton," said one gentleman, standing up in his seat, at 9h. 35m. A. M., and the team putting on more steam the Delaware River was in sight three minutes later. At 9h. 39m. the bridge was being crossed, and at 9h. 43m. Calhoun lane, Trenton, was reached. Crowds were awaiting the coach one block away at the State street corner, which extended down past the State House. Every doorway of the aristocratic mansions in that neighborhood contained ladies, and the cambrics waved by them seemed, if it were possible, like one vast sheet. Warren street was turned into at a smart pace, and at 9h. 46m. 45s. Mr. Bronson dropped his reins in front of the Trenton House. "Just 3m. 15s. ahead," said the timekeeper. The drag and teams were minutely inspected by the Trentonians.

ON TO PRINCETON.

Mr. G. P. Wetmore's team were quickly in place, and the fourth of the return stages commenced at 9h. 53m. 35s. A. M. Up Warren street, across the Feeder bridge and into the New Brunswick turnpike were fully a thousand persons observing the coach. At 10h. 3m. A. M. East Trenton was passed through, the large pottery factories claiming much attention from the Tally Ho's party. The Lawrenceville turnpike was reached at 10h. 8m. A. M., and for miles beyond the country is beautiful. Quite large farms are on each side of the road, and so particular are the owners of every inch of their property, the sign, "Persons defacing this fence will be prosecuted," may be seen strung along the pike at short intervals nearly to Princeton. When Hammill's school was passed in Lawrenceville fifty or more boys were on the roadside, with hats in hand, awaiting the coach. "Three cheers for the Tally Ho!" cried the leader, and the lads cheered very heartily. McDaniel's breeding farm was seen in the distance at 10:37 A. M., and six minutes later Ralph Hunt's pretty villa was passed. Then Purser Gulick's mansion, and at the foot of Stony Brookville ex-State Senator Brewster's villa was shot by. In the windows and on the porch of each were ladies waving their handkerchiefs. The Stockton property was given attention at 10:55 A. M., when Princeton was at hand. Though the students were at their recitations Stockton street contained many persons, and when the team of Mr. Wetmore stopped in front of the University Hotel there was a sufficient number of persons assembled to give the returning coaching party a merry welcome. The hotel was elegantly dressed with flags, and Mr. Niebuhr, the proprietor, stood on the sidewalk to receive the gentlemen. Time, 10:59 A. M., eleven minutes ahead! The roads all the way from Philadelphia had been found in good condition. Luncheon was ready and the party at once sat down to the table. Before the viands had been despatched word was conveyed to the coaching party that President McCosh was in the hotel and desired the gentlemen to visit the college buildings. The venerable Doctor was called into the room and introduced by Mr. Rives, who said in substance:—"Gentlemen, I have the honor of introducing you to Dr. McCosh, of Princeton College. The Doctor has kindly invited us to visit the college buildings, and he has just informed me that this is a great day for Princeton—great because of two very important matters, the transit of Mercury and the transit of Tally Ho." Dr. McCosh was very warmly received, and after an informal conversation he repeated his invitation, adding:—"And, gentlemen, I'll keep you only five minutes and promise to observe the Tally Ho rule, 'be on time.'" The gentlemen, having a few minutes to spare, accepted the President's invitation and left the hotel to make a hurried inspection of the college grounds and buildings. As they were filing out of the luncheon room Dr. McCosh said, laughing, "Gentlemen, coaching must be a healthy amusement, judging from your appearance."

ACROSS ROCKY HILL.

At 11:30 Mr. Fritsch's team of three roans and a chestnut were harnessed up, and then Fownes tooted on the horn as a recall signal for the party that had gone down with Dr. McCosh to look at the university. Presently they came back on a trot and scrambled up into their seats. There were several hundred people congregated around the University Hotel, and they gave a hearty cheer as the grooms let go the leaders' heads and the Tally Ho started on its trip to Franklin Park. It was just 11:45 when Mr. Fritsch sent his team rattling down the main street of Princeton. A couple of blocks below the hotel a very enthusiastic citizen had placed an old anvil on the side of the street, and just after the coach had passed he exploded a heavy charge of powder that made a report like a cannon, and set Mr. Fritsch's team on the run. Fortunately, however, he had them well in hand, and succeeded in bringing them down to a trot without any accident. A delegation from a boys' school made a donation of several bouquets of white lilacs, for which the coaching party acknowledged their thanks in the usual manner. The Tally Ho spun by the Princeton trotting track at a twelve-mile gait, and shortly afterward passed down a rather steep hill and over the Kingston Bridge on the Delaware and Raritan Canal. A short halt was made on the other side, while a cock horse was added to the team. A cock horse is the coaching term for a fifth horse, ridden by a postillion, that is hitched on ahead of the leaders. This addition to the motive power was made at the foot of Kingston Hill and at 12:04 P. M. the five horses were dragging the Tally Ho up that rather steep incline. Passing through the village of Kingston the coaching party received a very lively reception from a large party of schoolgirls in old-fashioned sun bonnets. At 12:12 the Tally Ho reached the foot of what is known as Rocky Hill, and was soon rattling along over the loose stones at a lively pace. Mr. Fritsch was getting good work out of his team, and the cock horse proved a great help over the rough portion of the road. Going down a short hill the cock horse became unhitched, but Fownes and a couple of grooms had everything in order in half a minute. At 12:27 P. M. the road began to improve and Mr. Fritsch kept his team going at a rattling gait until they reached the signboard that read "Kingston, three miles." A short stop of a couple of minutes was then made in order to take off the cock horse and give the team a dash of water. At 12:31 Mr. Fritsch sent them going again, and, swinging along at a hard trot, they made the next two and a half miles in thirteen minutes, which was pretty fair going on a rough road. There was a little mud; not enough to prove a serious annoyance. The Tally Ho entered Franklin Park, known originally as Six Mile Run, at 12:45, and a couple of minutes later drew up in front of the hotel. There were about a couple of hundred awaiting its arrival, and they took a very close interest in the unhitching of Mr. Fritsch's team. The latter were a trifle warm after their pull, but they did not look as if the journey had done them any harm. Mr. Fritsch made the stage in 1h. 2m.—just three minutes ahead of time.

PASSING THROUGH NEW BRUNSWICK.

No time was lost in hitching up Mr. Havemeyer's handsome team of dark browns, and Colonel Kane presently gathered up the ribbons and took his seat on the box. This stage was driven by Mr. Havemeyer on the Saturday's drive, but feeling tired yesterday Colonel Kane had volunteered to take his place. The Tally Ho started from Franklin Park at 12:50, just ten minutes ahead of time, and bowling along pretty fast the commencement of Three-Mile Run was made at 1 P. M. The roads were in fair order at this point of the stage. Three minutes later the Tally Ho dashed by the Three-Mile Run schoolhouse and the children wished the members of the Coaching Club a happy new year by way of greeting. The coach rattled across the track of the Millstone and Somerset Railroad, and a few minutes later passed by Wortman's Hotel under a large banner of the Stars and Stripes that had been hung across the road by some enthusiastic admirer of coaching. After about three or four minutes' drive over a rather rough road Colonel Kane piloted the team down a steep hill and then across the new bridge leading into New Brunswick. Passing along French street, followed by a delegation of trotting buggies that gathered additional strength at every block, the Tally Ho turned into Albany street, where the people were standing by hundreds along the sidewalks waiting for them to go by. The New Brunswick young ladies gave the gallant whips a hearty welcome and their hats kept moving off and on their heads every few seconds. At 1:29 P. M. Colonel Kane pulled up the Tally Ho in front of More's Hotel, where about a thousand people were congregated. After a halt of about five minutes, waiting for the drawbridge to close, Colonel Kane started his team and jogged up to the bridge over the Raritan River and canal. After a walk across the bridge the team started up the hill on the other side, and Postmaster Fisher and a party of ladies and gentlemen standing on his lawn waved their handkerchiefs as the coach passed by. There were some fifteen or twenty carriages and buggies accompanying the Tally Ho, and they followed along until the signboard two miles out of New Brunswick was reached. Colonel Kane drew up his team at 1:48, just thirteen minutes ahead of the schedule time, having made his stage in fifty-eight minutes—pretty good time, taking into consideration the five minutes delay at the bridge. There was quite a gathering of carriages of every description at the signboard and everybody was full of congratulations at the success of the coaching party.

PLOUGHING THROUGH THE MUD.

Mr. Perry Belmont was the whip for the next stage and as soon as his team were hitched up he sent them along, leaving the signboard at 1:51 P. M. The first mile of the road was pretty fair travelling, but it presently became rather heavy and gave the team plenty of work. At 2:04 P. M. Mr. Belmont came to a halt about a hundred yards from the railroad crossing as the Washington express dashed by, with the passengers waving their handkerchiefs out of the windows. After crosing the track the Tally Ho passed through the village of Metuchin, over a fair piece of road. A pretty little girl, with two large bouquets of lilacs in her hands, was waiting on the roadside, and the gallant Fownes jumped down and accepted the floral offerings, which he handed to the gentlemen on the coach. After leaving Metuchin the road became poor, and in some places was as soft as butter, letting the wheels sink nearly up to the hubs. Mr. Belmont kept his team to the collar all the time, and, getting at last on hard ground, rattled through the tollgate without stopping to partake of a lacteal beverage that had been prepared for their delectation, rattled past Menlo Park at 2:22 P. M. The road then crossed the railroad, and after a short run on a down grade passed Uniontown depot and then turned sharp to the right. After crossing a wooden bridge Mr. Belmont turned sharp to the left, through a country lane, over what is known as "Chaney Hill," and after about a mile of rather bad road struck the Woodbridge pike. There was a slight sprinkling of rain about this time, but it did not amount to much. At 2:48 P. M. the Tally Ho crossed the railroad for the third time this stage and turned into St. George's avenue, where a number of carriages that had come out from Rahway joined in the procession. The road for the rest of the stage was excellent, and Mr. Belmont sent the team along at a slashing pace, pulling up in front of the Farmers and Mechanics' Hotel at 2:58, just three minutes behind the schedule time. This was a very good performance considering the bad condition of the roads. The Rahway people turned out in great force, and there was a perfect jam all around the coach while the horses were being changed.

THE RIVAL FOUR-IN-HANDS.

A cross team of bays and grays, with Mr. Rives on the box, started on the next stage at 3:03 P. M., followed by a miscellaneous lot of vehicles, some of which had come from Newark to escort the Tally Ho over the road. At 3:15 P. M. a young lady in a pony carriage displayed a couple of handsome bouquets, and Fownes, jumping down, carried them to the gentlemen in the coach. Rattling along a pretty good road the first three miles of the stage were accomplished in 16 minutes and the Tally Ho dashed past the old Wheatsheaf Inn at 3:19 P. M. It was one of the stopping places on the old stage route, but since the introduction of steam the station has received the more aristocratic name of Linden. For the next mile the road was not quite as good, and the Tally Ho passed the Half-way House, which was decorated with flags, at 3:22 P. M. Here a scrub four-in-hand, harnessed up to a market wagon, joined in the drive. The wagon was boarded over and chairs fixed on the boards formed the seats for the party, who were nearly all armed with tin horns. The team was very tough and might have attracted the attention of Mr. Bergh, if he had been in the neighborhood. At 3:29 Rahway had been left four miles behind and the road began to improve as the Tally Ho approached Elizabeth. There were now nearly a hundred carriages of every description keeping company with the coach and at 3:35 P. M. the procession crossed the railroad track. Going down Broad street in Elizabeth a genuine curiosity was added to the exhibition in the shape of an old-time coach that had once been the property of General Scott. It was drawn by four horses, bay wheelers, with two blacks in the lead, and the cachman and footman (who hung on behind) were rigged out in handsome liveries. A bugler sat on the box with the coachman and responded to the music from Fowne's horn. Passing by the depot there was a regular rush of vehicles and the trotters were let out, swinging by the coach, with their light wagons behind them. Through Frelinghuysen avenue there was quite a display of flags and the pretty girls were out in great force, giving the coaching party a little more hat exercise. There was a good deal of reckless driving along the road, and the driver of the scrub team in the market wagon had a whipper-in engaged keeping his plugs up to their work. Some of the ladies in the carriages were elegantly attired in honor of the occasion, and one fair creature, seated behind a trotter, had a bunch of red, white and blue streamers floating from the top of her parasol. Her costume was very elaborate, flowers, feathers and lace being displayed in the most liberal profusion. At 3:53 P. M. the Tally Ho bowled along past Waverley Park and turned into the Boulevard, accompanied by a regular stream of carriages, and in five minutes the driver of the four plugs pulled up and started back for home, much to the delight of all parties in light wagons, as they were slightly scared of coming in contact with their lumbering companion. Passing the Boulevard Hotel the carriages were heading for Newark four deep, and the road was beginning to get rather dusty. After leaving the Boulevard Mr. Rives turned into Sherman avenue, and from thence into Pennsylvania avenue. Another turn into South street and the Tally Ho rattled into Broad street, which was packed with carriages awaiting its arrival. It was repeating the scene in Philadelphia on a small scale, and the carriages in many places were six deep. They were all heading toward Grace Church, and as the Tally Ho neared that point there was a general rush to get up near the stopping place. It was a perfect miracle how some of the pedestrians were not run over as they rushed in among the carriages, utterly regardless of all consequences. The sidewalks and street were jammed with people, and the grooms had hard work unhitching the horses. Some of the houses were dressed up with flags, and altogether Broad street presented quite a gala appearance. Mr. Rives arrived at 4:10 P. M. sharp on time.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

As soon as his team had been hitched up Colonel Kane took hold of the ribbons, and, mounting the box, started off at 4:16 P. M., moving at a round trot through the crowded street. The carriages and people followed along as fast as they could and as the Tally Ho turned down into Market street, the coaching party were loudly cheered by the crowd of nearly a thousand people that were waiting to see them. Colonel Kane kept his team going and the Tally Ho jumped along over car tracks, passing the Market street depot and then along by the gas works. The employés in the different factories and shops along Market street were all at the windows to cheer the Tally Ho as it passed along, and, turning down Bowery street, Colonel Kane struck the plank road at 4:31 P. M. There were a few light wagons waiting there, and they nearly all accompanied the coach to Jersey City. Passing along the canal that seems to be a receptacle for the canine race, as countless bodies appeared to be floating around in a bloated condition, the Tally Ho crossed the bridge over the Passaic River at 4:40 P. M., and seven minutes later rolled over the Hackensack Bridge. As the coach neared Jersey City a couple of youthful equestrians on good looking gray saddle horses constituted themselves into a body guard, and did escort duty as far as the ferry. After a long pull up a paved avenue the Tally Ho turned down Grand street, followed by about twenty carriages, and at 5:11 made Montgomery street. The balance of the journey to the ferry was quickly disposed of, and at 5:14 P. M. the Tally Ho rolled on board the Desbrosses street boat. The coaching party dismounted and stretched their legs about the deck, courteously answering the countless queries that the curious bystanders propounded. Just before the boat got into the dock they returned to their seats, Mr. Parker sitting next Colonel Kane, and Messrs. Belmont, Fritsch, Fairman Rogers and Rives occupying the seat directly behind. The Tally Ho rolled out of the ferry house at 5:30 P. M., and heading down West street, followed Laight as far as Canal, and thence to Broadway, which was reached at 5:36 P. M. All the way up Broadway the fronts of the stores were lined with people and hats were doffed and handkerchiefs waved. The people in the stages put their heads out of the windows and everybody that could took a look at the Tally Ho. Watches were taken out and consulted by faces that expressed decided astonishment at the wonderful time that had been made. Crossing Fourteenth street at 5:45 P. M., Colonel Kane dashed along to Sixteenth street and then turned into Fifth avenue. The members of the Union Club mustered in force at the windows and on the sidewalk and gave them a very hearty reception.

ELEVEN MINUTES AHEAD OF TIME.

There was a tremendous crowd all around the Brunswick Hotel and the carriages crowded the streets for a couple of blocks each way. The porch over the main entrance was tastefully draped and hung with flags, and formed quite an elegant private box, from which the lady friends of the Coaching Club were afforded an excellent view of the arrival of the coach. Colonel Kane rattled up in front of the hotel at precisely 5:49, just eleven minutes ahead of time. There was such a terrific crush on the sidewalk that the police had to open a lane to afford the Tally Ho's passengers admission to the hotel. A couple of minutes after the arrival Mr. Douglas drove up his team of bays and showy black and orange drag, and following in his wake came Mr. S. S. Haven, driving his coach with a team of bay wheelers and gray leaders. As the coaching party were passing through the hotel the photographer from Princeton showed them the result of his labors, and they expressed themselves quite pleased with the pictures. The crowd hung around the hotel for over half an hour, and the carriages passed to and fro until at last the dinner hour approached, and their occupants concluded it was time to go home.

OBITUARY.

COLONEL O. E. AUSTIN.

Colonel Oscar E. Austin, late proprietor of the Wooster House, Danbury, Conn., died of dropsy at the residence of his brother, in Boston, on May 4. Colonel Austin was a native of Vermont. He was born at the west village of Brattleboro, on February 27, 1828, and died in his fifty-first year. He entered mercantile life when quite young in connection with the firm of Cune, Brackett & Co., in Brattleboro. He married the daughter of Asa Boyden, of Guilford, and, in connection with his brother-in-law, formed the firm of Austin & Boyden. After a lapse of several years, and at the close of the war, he went South to reside. He located at Pilatka, Fla., and undertook the management of the Putnam House, a popular winter resort. As a Union man his views and sentiments were well defined, but he was not radical. At this time sectional feeling ran high, and he was more than once publicly threatened with personal violence. He was finally persuaded to become a candidate for the Legislature, and was elected to represent the Putnam district by a large majority. He entered upon the duties of his office, and worked zealously to promote the interests of his constituents as well as of the State at large. At the close of his term he was appointed by Governor Harrison Reed Commissioner of Emigration for the State of Florida, and had his office in this city. He leaves a wife, but no children. His funeral will take place in Brattleboro to-day.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, May 6, 1878.

THE COMMUNISTS AND THE NATIONALS—ANY OUTBREAK OF THE FORMER PROVIDED FOR.

The movements of the people who call themselves Communists in Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati and San Francisco attract attention here, but it is not yet believed that the Communists alone are strong enough to accomplish much mischief, nor that they have such alliances nor understanding with the secret political organizations in the West, the Nationals, as would lead these to co-operate with them. The Nationals are largely composed of farmers and other people owning property, and who are not ready, therefore, to join hands with those whose aim is, as they say in the West, "a great divide."

There is an impression in official circles that the Communists have set the month of June for such a rising as they can effect and that the San Francisco organization, having the most desperate chiefs, is likely to lead off. There is no doubt that a good many sensible people in Western cities think there is cause for grave apprehensions, but the law-abiding citizens are not unprepared and there is an impression here that, while the government may be called on to help to suppress riots, the people will be better prepared for resistance than last year, and will perhaps in some of the Western cities be found ready to take matters in their own hands, and teach the lawless classes such a lesson as they learned in San Francisco and as was not forgotten for a long time.

OUR EXPORTS IN EXCESS OF IMPORTS—EVIDENCES OF THE WEALTH OF THE COUNTRY AND OF RETURNING PROSPERITY—NECESSITY FOR ADDITIONAL MARKETS FOR OUR PRODUCTS.

The astonishing fact that our exports during the past year exceed our imports in value by over $200,000,000 calls attention to the other fact that the country is suffering, not from poverty, but from a plethora of everything really valuable, combined with a lack of markets for the disposal of the surplus. A nation which has more factories, more machinery, more skilled laborers, more railroads, more agricultural produce, more land in cultivation, more animals to work it and more labor-saving contrivances than it ever had before, and more in proportion to population also than it ever had, cannot be called poor. Official figures show that the increase has been greater in the seven years since 1870 than in the ten years between 1860 and 1870, which everybody cites as years of high prosperity. The aggregate quantity of land under cultivation has increased from 90,000,000 of acres in 1870, to 120,000,000 in 1877; that is to say, we have 30,000,000 acres more under the plough in 1877 than in 1870. The following table shows the number of animals and amount of farm products in 1870 and 1877:—

Cotton in 1877 the largest crop since 1860.

Coal—29,000,000 tons mined in 1870, and 47,000,000 tons in 1877.

Mr. Burchard, of Illinois, who some days ago brought out these figures in a speech on the Bankrupt law, remarked that "forty-seven per cent of all the laborers in the country are farmers, and are busy in the field and not howling about the condition of the country;" and he added, very sensibly:—"It is true there are individuals in distress. Always in the history of all countries there are increased failures upon a falling market. We have had in this country within thirty years three periods of the inflation and decline of prices presenting similar phenomena and financial results—a rise in prices until 1837, a fall until 1861, again a rise from 1861 to 1865, and from the latter year until 1869 a decline. Again an advance up to 1872 and down again to the present period. When there was an advance in prices men thought they were making money. If they held their property during all the period from the rise to the fall they found themselves financially just where they were when they started; but if during that period they disposed of their property at the high prices they gained of course by the advance. The purchaser must by the decline lose all that the seller has made, and his investment may and often does involve him in liabilities that the property itself will not suffice to discharge. Loss and failures are the inevitable result of a falling market, and they will be the heavier and more frequent when the inflation of prices above the usual rates has been the greatest. The country is in this condition to-day. It has returned from the speculative, unhealthy and fictitious prices of 1872 to real values and prices such as ruled prior to 1860. It is the necessary and unavoidable road to a sound business prosperity, and failures must attend speculative purchases and visionary schemes, and even well planned enterprises and investments be rendered profitless by a decline in prices

The HERALD's letters on the condition of New England manufactures attract the attention of thoughtful men here, as showing that in the midst of distress the country is really returning to a sound prosperity. But one thought is frequently expressed here, that the country has, ever since 1862, been encouraging, subsidizing and fostering by immense grants the means for internal transport and exchange of products, and has in the same time by extremely high tariffs discouraged foreign commerce. It has done everything that could be done by the most lavish expenditures to expedite and cheapen the transport of surplus products to the seaboard, and there it has left them. Foreign commerce, so far from being encouraged or fostered, has been persistently crushed for fifteen long years, and the premium offered by the government in subsidies and land grants for perfecting the machinery of interior transport and exchange has drawn capital and enterprise constantly away from foreign trade, so that our consuls complain everywhere that American merchants and manufacturers have forgotten even how to adapt themselves to foreign markets; the old race of foreign merchants who did so much by their capital and enterprise for the commerce and industry of the country has either died out or been driven to other pursuits by high tariffs impeding the exchange of our surplus products abroad and by the contempt with which Congress has for so many years treated all their pleas and representations. Our foreign commerce has consequently to be recreated; the country now suffers for its long neglect of this vitally important branch of industry; it suffers because it has so long pursued a Chinese policy, and wages are low and great bodies of men are unemployed here in the midst of the greatest abundance for the same reason that wages are low and people starve in China—because we have discouraged and crushed foreign commerce and put a legal Chinese wall about the country.

THE TOBACCO AND INCOME TAX.

Mr. Tucker tried to-day to pass his bill reducing the tax on tobacco and imposing an income tax and failed, the House refusing to suspend the rules, which requires a two-thirds vote. The vote as recorded stood 120 to 115, and those not voting would have made the vote an actual majority against the bill. The friends of the bill acknowledge this evening that they cannot pass the bill this session.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, May 6, 1878.

THE FLORIDA ELECTORAL FRAUDS.

The impression is now general among leading members of the House that the proposition to investigate the electoral dispute will be merged into the contest between Messrs. Finley and Bisbee for the seat in Congress held by the latter as the representative from the Second Florida district. This district embraces Archer precinct and Baker county, where the principal frauds are alleged to have been perpetrated, and the further elucidation of the matter in dispute between the contestants will enable the Committee on Elections to go into the questions raised by the confessions of McLin and Dennis.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA CONTESTED ELECTIONS.

It is understood that the House Committee on Elections will report in favor of declaring vacant the seats of Congressmen Rainey and Smalls, colored members from South Carolina. The ground for this is intimidation and alleged military interference during the election in 1876. This report will bring up the South Carolina election troubles and frauds, the object appearing to be to contribute as much ammunition as possible to the coming political campaign. Ex-Treasurer Cardozo is in Washington with copies of letters written by Secretary Sherman and Minister Noyes at the time of the counting of the South Carolina vote, counselling the Returning Board to "do their duty in the emergency."

PACKARD NOMINATED CONSUL TO LIVERPOOL—RECALL OF GENERAL TORBERT FROM PARIS—A SURPRISE TO THE SENATE.

Last week the House Committee on Expenditures of the State Department took testimony as to charges of irregularity in the conduct of Consul General Torbert at Paris. The attention of the State Department having been called to the same matter through the individual complaints of persons who thought themselves aggrieved it was thought to remove Mr. Torbert, and to-day a genuine surprise was given the Senate by nominations transferring ex-Governor Fairchild from Liverpool to Paris, and appointing ex-Governor S. B. Packard, of Louisiana, to be Consul General at Liverpool. The appointment of Governor Packard to so important an office could not be explained, unless as showing a desire on the part of the administration to get him out of the country. His friends say that he will not accept, and the belief here is that he will not, as his personal and business interests are in Louisiana, and he does not wish to leave them for any position in the gift of the government. Mr. Packard is now on a visit to his former home in Maine.

AMENDMENTS TO THE HOUSE RULES AND THEIR EFFECT.

The House Committee on Rules will to-morrow report several important amendments to present rules—namely, one by Mr. Sayler, providing that all bills releasing indebtedness to the government shall be first considered in the Committee of the Whole House, and, second, an addendum to rule 112, providing that Senate bills and amendments of the Senate to House bills, where not germane to said House bills, appropriating money, land or property of the United States, shall be first considered in the Committee of the Whole House.

The effect of this will be to increase the business on the calendar of the Committee of the Whole House, and also increase the chances of the passage of some such measure as proposed by Mr. Potter for the adjudication of private claims and the rearrangement of the rules pertaining to the Committee of the Whole House with respect to public bills. Mr. Garfield will report from the same committee two propositions placing the Committee of Ways and Means on the same footing with the Committee on Appropriations. At present any of the appropriation bills may be made a special order by a majority vote, and the amendment proposed, if adopted, will enable the Committee of Ways and Means to dispose of several bills reported or ready to be reported, even if Congress should adjourn by the middle of June.

THE NATIONAL LIBRARY BUILDING.

The commission on the matter of a National Library Building will, it is understood, agree to recommend a site at the western front of Judiciary square.

GENERAL WASHINGTON DESPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, May 6, 1878.

LIABILITIES TO THE GOVERNMENT OF JUDGE WHITTAKER, OF LOUISIANA—COMMUNICATION FROM THE PRESIDENT TO THE SENATE.

The President sent to the Senate to day communications from the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury in response to Mr. Howe's resolution of April 16, which called for information in regard to the liabilities of W. R. Whittaker arising under his administration of the offices of United States Assistant Treasurer and Collector of Internal Revenue at New Orleans, and as to the measures taken by the government to enforce them. Secretary Sherman states that a suit for $11,182 is now pending against Whittaker on his account as Collector of Internal Revenue from December, 1863, to April, 1865. It is also stated that while Whittaker was in office as Assistant Treasurer at New Orleans, between October 15, 1866, and May 10, 1869, a deficit of $1,076,797 occurred, which was subsequently reduced to $680,891. The deficit according to Whittaker's statement, arose from his accepting from his predecessor, Assistant Treasurer May, about $500,000 of certificates of the First National Bank of New Orleans, and counting them as cash on hand, beside which he had afterward received a number of certified checks of May, then President of the bank, converted them into sundry notes and bills of exchange, which were counted as cash at the time the deficit was discovered. Suit for the recovery of the deficit was commenced in the United States Circuit Court in 1868, and upon its trial in 1872 a judgment was rendered in favor of the defendant, Mr. William Grant, the special counsel employed by the government in this case, reporting that the jury probably based their finding upon the act of settlement between the late Assistant Treasurer May and the United States, whereby the debt due to the government was discharged by an assignment of all May's property. There was, he alleges, no error in verdict and no bill of exceptions asked for. He also states that all the defendants were insolvent.

Attorney General Devens reports concerning the criminal indictments against Whittaker that they were three in number, and that the first charged an embezzlement of $1,058,421, and when tried resulted in Whittaker's acquittal. Special United States Attorney Grant wrote to the Attorney General in April, 1877, stating that the remaining indictments were for the same offence as to particular sums of money, apparently a portion of the larger amount for the embezzlement of which Whittaker had been tried and acquitted and that in his (Grant's) opinion it was not advisable or proper to try them. He therefore asked that authority be given him to dismiss them. Attorney General Devens in reply directed him to consult with the United States District Attorney, Mr. Lacey, and left it to their joint discretion to enter a nolle pros if they agreed such course was advisable. The orders to dismiss these indictments were soon afterward entered, and the Attorney General, in conclusion, says he has no reason to doubt that the two officers (Messrs. Lacey and Grant) exercised their discretion wisely.

How the Astronomers Watched the Transit.

WORK OF THE FRENCH COMMISSION.

Clouds and Haziness Obscuring the Sun.

GENERAL RESULTS SATISFACTORY.

THE OBSERVATIONS BY THE FRENCH ASTRONOMICAL COMMISSION AT OGDEN, UTAH—CLOUDS OBSCURING THE SKY AT THE EARLY STAGES—THE EGRESS SATISFACTORILY OBSERVED.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

OGDEN, Utah, May 6, 1878.

At five A. M. to-day the sky was cloudy but not altogether unfavorable for the observations for the transit of Mercury to be made here to-day, and the representative of the HERALD repaired to the Astronomical Observatory built in 1873 by Lieutenant Wheeler, which the French astronomers had selected for their operation. The observers are Professor Charles Andre, of the Observatory at Lyons; Professor Alfred Angot, of the Lycée Fontanes, Paris, and Mons. Phillippe Hatt, of the French coast survey. Professor Angot conducts his observations with a six-inch photo-lithograph equatorial in the dome of the building; the other two gentlemen observe in a temporary building with six-inch equatorials of improved construction. A heliostat with photographic apparatus is also brought into requisition. The representative of the HERALD was kindly permitted to witness the observations. At six A. M. the clouds thickened and at forty-one minutes after seven snow began to fall in flakes.

THE TRANSIT.

The transit of Mercury began at 7h. 44m. 43s., but owing to the unfavorable atmospheric conditions the ingress exterior and interior contact were only imperfectly observed. At half-past one P. M. the clouds consolidated and by two P. M. Professors Andre and Angot were busily engaged in photographing the progress of the transit. The HERALD representative had an opportunity to observe the phenomena. The body of Mercury as it appears on the sun's disk is not black as that of Venus, but a water blue. At 3h. 15m. 26s. the egress took place by inner contact, and at 3h. 18m. 34s. the phenomena was over. Seventy-eight photographic negatives by photo-lithograph and heliostat were produced. The observations for egress were satisfactory and Professor Andre expresses himself satisfied with the result.

The sky cleared about noon. Only three photographs were taken up to one o'clock P. M., after which time seventy-five photographs were taken till the time of exit, which was at seventeen minutes past three P. M. The observations are regarded as successful and satisfactory.

OBSERVATIONS IN TEXAS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

AUSTIN, May 6, 1878.

The transit of Mercury began at four minutes past ten o'clock and ended at twenty-one minutes of six P. M., Washington time. The first and second contacts were lost in clouds drifting. The weather was cloudy all day. The polar and Equatorial diameters of Mercury were measured and found equal. No aurora around planet and no satellite was seen. The third and fourth contacts were well observed. No black drops were observed.

OBSERVATIONS MADE AT WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, May 6, 1878.

According to the observations of Professor Newcomb and his assistants the second internal contact of Mercury with the western edge of the sun occurred at thirty-three minutes fifty seconds past five o'clock this afternoon, and the external contact two minutes and fifty seconds later. The planet through the telescope appeared not larger than a silver five-cent piece. Gentlemen engaged in the work say there could not have been a better day for the observations. Professor Eastman was at the old telescope at the National Observatory, and Professor Hall superintended the taking of photographs of the passing planet. These photographs were produced by means of the horizontal telescope and reflector.

Observations of the second and third interval contacts of Mercury will be made last this afternoon. The Naval Observatory will not be prepared to furnish any information or an official report of the transit until to-morrow, it being necessary to first make computations for the adjustment of time.

The transit of Mercury, in addition to being observed at the Naval Observatory, was also observed by Professor Newcombe and several of his assistants, who were provided with telescopes at the Nautical Almanac office. The observation fully confirmed the various results for the motion of the perihelion of Mercury. The internal contact was noted by Professor Newcomb at 7 minutes 43 seconds past ten o'clock this morning, only ten seconds earlier than the time represented by various tables.

OBSERVATIONS AT CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—THE TRANSIT CAREFULLY FOLLOWED BY A LARGE STAFF OF ASTRONOMERS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

CAMBRIDGE, May 6, 1878.

The observations at Harvard to-day of the transit of Mercury were very successfully made, the clearness of the day facilitating the photographing and recording, and when all calculations shall have been completed it is expected that valuable additions will be made to the scientific data of the day. The transit began at 10h. 37m. A. M. At 10h. 30m. the shadow engulfed the earth. While the planet was upon the disk an attempt was made to discover whether Mercury was fringed with a ring of light just before touching the sun, and whether this ring appeared as a bright or dark circle round the planet. When fully on the solar disk and also to note one or more bright spots if there are any, upon Mercury, photographs were taken at stated intervals by Mr. Arthur Searle, assisted by Mr. Hudson and others. The contacts were observed on the west equatorial by Professor Pickering, at the east equatorial by Mr. Waldo, and with smaller glasses by Messrs. W. Upton, C. H. Metcalf and others. The transit at noon was observed on the meridian diameter by Professor William A. Gray.

Over sixty photographs were obtained, mostly after three o'clock. Between five and six hundred measurements of the diameter of the planet were noted, but the records of time in transit are not yet worked out. No appreciable variation from the time anticipated is expected to result from the figures.

In the afternoon a clear sky afforded a most favorable opportunity for observation. The contact took place several seconds later than 10:26 A. M. The general results are considered quite satisfactory.

AT AMHERST COLLEGE, MASS.—FAIR WEATHER AND MODERATE SUCCESS.

AMHERST, MASS., May 6, 1878.

The result of the observations at the College observatory upon to-day's transit of Mercury was as favorable as the weather would permit. The first contact was not taken, but accurate measurements of the planet's position were made and the exact time recorded. Photographs were taken during the planet's course, and the last contact—internal and external—was also obtained. Noon signals from Washington to Amherst are to be continued until next Saturday, and it is expected that the longitude of Amherst will be determined with exactness. The work was done by Professor Esty, assisted by G. W. Stearns and E. E. Herbert, of the senior class.

WATCHING THE TRANSIT AT THE NAVAL ACADEMY, ANNAPOLIS, MD.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

ANNAPOLIS, May 6, 1878.

Commander John A. Howell, assisted by Lieutenant Commanders A. D. Brown and C. G. Bowen, made observations to-day at the Naval Academy observatory on the transit of Mercury. Commander Howell took the first contact of Mercury with the disk of the sun and then the differences of the declination between the limbs of the sun and Mercury by the micrometer. The observations are still in progress, and will end with the final passage of the sun. Three instruments were at work during the transit. The weather was most favorable for the observations, the results of which will be forwarded to the United States Observatory at Washington. Owing to the motion of Mercury with the sun, the little planet that seemed no larger than a pin's head when viewed through the big telescope at the Academy appeared on a mad race to cross the sun's lurid disk, while really it was making a slow march over the face of the greater light.

Commodore J. A. Howell, head of the department of astronomy at the Naval Academy, furnishes the Associated Press the following report of his observation of the transit of Mercury to-day:—

The following were the Washington times as observed with the United States Naval Academy refractor, 9 feet focal length, 8-inch aperture, power of eye piece, 212:—Ingress, exterior contact, 10 hours, 7 minutes, 3 seconds; ingress, interior contact, 10 hours, 10 minutes, 3 seconds; egress interior contact, 5 hours, 34 minutes, 3 seconds; egress exterior contact, 5 hours, 36 minutes, 39 seconds.

UNFAVORABLE WEATHER IN NEW HAMPSHIRE.

HANOVER, May 6, 1878.

The weather here is unfavorable to good observation of the transit of Mercury, cross currents in the air causing a haziness, and only occasional good views are obtained. Mr. Paul will not make any close calculations until after his return to Washington. The first contact with the sun took place at 10h. 23m. 26s. A. M. The second contact was not determinable. The weather this afternoon encourages the hope that more desirable measurements may be made. Professors Quimby, Emerson and Pattee are also taking observations. There is a large number continually present to view the planet when it is to be seen.

Both contacts of Mercury with the sun were observed this morning (instead of one as first reported), they being 2m. 50s. apart. There was a clearer sky this afternoon, though it was cloudy when it was necessary to take most of the observations. At half-past four o'clock, when the declinations of the sun and Mercury were the same, an attempt was made to determine the difference of right ascension of the two by transits of limbs of the sun and Mercury; but, though the sky was clear, the air was unsteady and observations were of little value. At the close of the transit the internal contact occurred at 5h. 53m. 13s., the external contact being 2m. 32s. later.

SUCCESSFUL OBSERVATIONS AT HAMILTON COLLEGE—INDICATIONS OF AN ATMOSPHERE AROUND MERCURY.

UTICA, N. Y., May 6, 1878.

Professor Peters, of Hamilton College, Clinton made successful observations of the transit of Mercury to-day. Clouds interfered somewhat with the observation of the internal contact. Professor Peters is of opinion that he discovered indications of an atmosphere on the planet.

VASSAR ASTRONOMERS WATCHING MERCURY.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 6, 1878.

The students of the astronomy class at Vassar College took seven photographs of the transit of Mercury to-day at the following named hours:—10:40 and 11:52 A. M., and 12:14, 12:52, 1:03, 1:21 and 1:36 P. M. The first indentation upon the sun's disk was splendidly seen, and as the planet passed along some of the students noted a halo about it. In the afternoon light clouds interrupted the observations some, but, generally speaking, all the observations were successful.

The entrance of Mercury on the sun's disk was well seen at Vassar Observatory and the first photograph taken at twenty minutes to eleven A. M.

OBSERVATIONS AT PHILADELPHIA—A REPORT TO BE PREPARED.

PHILADELPHIA, May 6, 1878.

Close observations were made in this city to-day, in common with those made at other places, of the transit of Mercury. A number of scientific gentlemen assembled in the Observatory, at the Boy's High School, to witness the planet in transit, but no one was permitted in the Observatory until the contact had been discovered and passed, except Professor Benjamin Snyder and his assistant. The first point of contact was made at some seconds past 10:12 o'clock A. M., which in astronomical reckoning would be May 5, 22h. 4m. Washington mean time. The planet made the first point of contact about eighteen degrees above the equator of the sun, and, pursuing a west southwest direction, emerged at a quarter before six P. M. some sixty degrees below the Equator. The data taken by Professor Snyder will be carefully computed and embodied in a report to be sent by him to the Washington Observatory.

OBSERVATIONS AT LEWISTON, ME.—THE WEATHER UNFAVORABLY CLOUDY.

LEWISTON ME., May 6, 1878.

Professor Fullerton, of Bates eological School, made observations of the transit of Mercury to-day. In the forenoon it was obscured and in the afternoon clouds interfered.

AT WEST POINT ACADEMY—SUCCESSFUL OBSERVATIONS OF THE TRANSIT.

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 6, 1878.

Observations for all four contacts of Mercury with the sun were successfully made to-day at the West Point Observatory.

THE OBSERVATIONS AT DETROIT UNSATISFACTORY ON ACCOUNT OF CLOUDINESS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

DETROIT, Mich., May 6, 1878.

The observations on the transit of Mercury made here to-day by the scientific corps of the lake survey were unsatisfactory. The first contact was rated the condition of the atmosphere being favorable, but shortly after clouds and haze interfered and the view of the small planet was obscured, much to the sorrow of the eager observers.

THE HERALD OF THE GODS.

The conditions proved highly favorably yesterday for the local telescopic-smoked window-glass observations of Mercury's transit. At the hour of first external contact old Sol beamed down from a sky slightly flecked with clouds, which served a good purpose in now and then shading his intense brilliancy, and enabling the thousands of amateur astronomers to bring their pieces of smoked glass to a proper bearing. The preparation of a piece of window pane for an astronomical observation is an undertaking requiring no little skill and circumspection. It is necessary, for instance, to use or rather burn an oleagenous substance in order to procure the proper degree of fattiness in the smoke. The glass must be big enough so that the scientist may not burn his own fingers in the operation of smoking, and, finally, the smoky side of the glass must be turned toward the heavenly body under observation, otherwise the observer is likely to get smudged with lampblack on the brow or nose. The delicate russet tints of some specimens of lager beer bottles are just the hues proper for making an observation through smoked glass. Unfortunatley the convexity of the surface exposed to the solar rays of a piece of broken bottle does not produce the desired effect on the vision. The angle of incidence being equal to that of reflection a scattering of the rays of light takes place, so that an observer using a bottle is likely to see several images and is likely to find it difficult to tell which is the right one. As exactness is essential to securing a valuable result it has been deemed advisable by modern scientists to abandon the use of the achromatic beer bottle for observations of the sun, and to substitute the simpler methods of smoking a piece of window glass.

After the first external and first internal contacts were observed Mercury was fairly on his travels over the sun's disk. He gradually drew from the centre of what might be termed the northwest quadrant of the solar disk toward and north of the centre. In this transit the planet looked like a small black spot buried in a sea of light, yet preserving its distinctness. If the planet had no atmosphere its appearance would be very much clearer. But, as it has a dense envelope of air or other gaseous matter about it, the solar rays were refracted through this atmosphere and tended to diminish the diameter of the planet, except to those looking at it through large and powerful telescopes. Drawing near noon the sky became overclouded and threatening, and the sun was frequently obscured, though his rays broke through many rifts in the vaporous veil overhead. During this period of cloudiness business with smoked glass and telescope was suspended in New York, but public curiosity did not abate in the least. Many people, who had not heard or read of Mercury's transit, could not make out what other people were at, staring up at the sun through a bit of sooty glass. Their curiosity was as to what these apparently crazy people were doing. Others watched the sun in vain for a sign, but saw nothing on his bright face. Several people were just sure that they saw them—"them" meaning some figures which the observer believed necessary to a properly conducted transit. So the day wore on and the clouds passed off, giving to the later hours a splendid opportunity for observing the final movements of Mercury.

The fact that Mercury can be seen with far less difficulty and without the intervention of smoked or other glass at numerous stated periods every year, and the additional fact that he could not be seen yesterday excepting through a powerful opera glass or telescope were no drawbacks to the intense desire of the many amateur moon starers—or, as the anagrammatists have it, astronomers—to see him during the time of his transit. Why they wished to see him it was hard to say, for they could calculate nothing from it. Even the five-inch telescope which Professor Peck aimed at the God of Day was not large enough to afford scientifically valuable views, but the rage of the people was none the less, and from every available roof and most of the street corners in the city "observations" were taken. As a fact, probably not one of those who had strained their necks and weakened their eyes really saw Mercury; but during the evening, strange to say, there was hardly a citizen in New York who had not "had an excellent view of the experiment." The gentleman who was some time ago arraigned in the Tombs Police Court as a vagrant, and who refuted the charge by explaining that his profession was smoking glasses for eclipses, yesterday made enough to keep him in bread and beer for weeks. The peripatetic scientist who performs on a big telescope in the streets, charging ten cents a squint, made also large profits, and everybody who owned or could borrow an opera glass was proud and happy.

Professor Peck, as was hinted, aimed the big Columbia College telescope at the sun from the vantage ground of the observatory on the college green, and curious students and grave professors in great numbers took observations at second hand, a large canvas screen being arranged in such a way that a reflection of the phenomenon was cast upon it. During the transit a number of young ladies from a neighboring seminary came on, not to see the students, but to view the transit. Two or three of them were late, and were very much disappointed when they were told that the Professor would by no means "repeat the experiment."

Mr. Rutherford, of Second avenue, has a glass of eleven inches which he had trained on the point of observation, and assisted by Professor Ingersoll, of Columbia College, took a number of valuable photographic views of the transit, which probably afford the only important scientific basis of calculation that was obtained in the city.

WATCHING THE CROSSING PLANET AT PROFESSOR DRAPER'S OBSERVATORY, HASTINGS, ON THE HUDSON.

In anticipation of Mercury's transit across the sun's disc several astronomers and scientists met on Sunday last at the observatory of Professor Henry Draper, Hastings, on the Hudson. Besides this gentleman there were present Professor George F. Barker, of the University of Pennsylvania; Professor J. W. Draper, of the New York University; Professor E. S. Holden, of the Naval Observatory, Washington, D. C., and Dr. Daniel Draper, director of the Meteorological Observatory, Central Park. Sunday night was spent in making sets of preparatory observations of some of the planets, and in getting all the instruments into a state of perfect working order. Yesterday morning the party, together with several other gentlemen, were on watch at the observatory by eight o'clock, and made the final adjustments of the apparatus about to be used.

THE DRAPER OBSERVATORY.

The observatory itself is composed of two domes enclosing circular spaces in which the great telescopes are mounted. Between the domes there is a photographic operating room, to the north and contiguous are a workshop well supplied with mechanics' tools and a beautifully fitted up hot air engine of two horse power, that drives the lathe upon which Professor Draper turned all the shafts and pinions, and cut the complicated wheel work used in mounting his great telescope. On the west side of the larger dome, which is twenty-two feet in diameter, is a transit room with instruments that are principally used in observing the sun's passage across the meridian. In the larger dome is mounted the unsurpassed twenty-eight inch reflector which took Professor Draper eighteen years to construct and fit up. This instrument, with its delicately adjusted clockwork, so arranged as to allow the glass to noiselessly follow the heavenly bodies in their course, is said to be far superior to the great telescope of Lord Rosse, which was at one time considered to be the best in the world. Next to it in point of merit is the instrument used in the Naval Observatory at Washington, D. C. Close along the surface of the tube of this immense telescope two others of less power are mounted in directions parallel to the axis of the tube. One of these instruments is a twelve inch reflector, the work of Mr. Alvan Clark, and the other is a valuable six-inch achromatic reflector. The two last named glasses were principally used yesterday, for the reason that the employment of a very great telescopic power would give to the planet observed too much the appearance of a dancing or "boiling" motion. In the smaller dome there is a very fine fifteen-inch Newtonian reflector, which was mostly used by Professor Barker. Professors Draper and Holden took their observations from the other two instruments. In a corner of the room adjoining the larger dome a chronograph is fitted up. The office of this instrument, aided by a chronometer having a pair of electric wires to connect it with a glass pen, is to enable the observer to measure the time of any observation down to the hundredth part of a second. A camera ten inches square was fastened to the face of the tube of the great reflector, and had an instantaneous shutter, whereby the exposure of the sensatized glass to the light was regulated, and in this way the position of the planet photographed from time to time as it made its course across the sun's disc from right to left. So delicately was the photographic apparatus arranged that an exposure of 1-1,000 of a second in duration could be obtained.

THE WEATHER CONDITIONS.

The weather was, upon the whole, favorable for the important work on hand; the fore part of the day was clear, and the latter part alternately clear and cloudy. The atmosphere, though apparently undisturbed and beautiful was, in the forenoon, charged with an amount of gaseous vapors and caloric that made it extremely difficult to get correct observations of the time of the planet's first contact with the sun's limb.

THE TRANSIT.

The predicted time for the first contact was, according to Washington mean time:—

I. 10h. 5m. 59 sec.

II. 10h. 9m. 6 sec.

The difference between the first and second times of contact, as above given, shows the approximately calculated time occupied by the planet from the instant of its first contact with the sun until that when its outer limb comes opposite that of the sun; or, in other words, the time occupied by Mercury in traversing on the sun's disk, a distance equal to his own apparent diameter. At the instant of first contact the planet was "boiling;" that is, jumping about on the sun's surface for a distance about equal to three times his own diameter, and therefore the exact time of first contact could not be accurately ascertained. It may be confidently stated, however, that the error between the estimated and the real time of first contact does not exceed half a minute. It is also certain that the difference between the predicted and the real time of contact was not more than half a minute. As there was no time yesterday to compare, reduce and arrange the figures obtained the exact time of contact could not be given. During the observations the sun's disk was brought to the eyeglass of the telescope and shown on a reddish colored glass, with the planet not larger in appearance than a grain of mustard seed, dancing around so as to take the sharpest vision to define its diameter. A moment's inspection of this unsteady little globule showed at once how difficult it was to get the instant of his first contact with the sun, on account of the vibratory motion imparted to him through the unfavorable condition of the atmosphere.

PHASES OF THE PHENOMENON.

Let the circular part of a twelve-inch clock face represent the sun, then a very small pea on its surface will bear about the same proportion to it that the image of Mercury did yesterday to the sun's disk. Following this illustration a good idea may be obtained of the planet's course across the sun if we suppose that he commenced to interpose himself between us and the great luminary at a spot which would be properly indicated as half-past four o'clock on the clock dial. From this point the course of Mercury was upward, in a slightly curvilinear direction, toward eight o'clock, between which and half-past eight he went off the sun's disk. While the planet was coursing his way gradually over the surface of the sun eighteen photographs of him were taken by Professor Draper, several of the negatives being very good ones. The photographs are on a plate eight by six inches, and show a picture of the sun five inches in diameter with the little dark speck of a planet in its true position at the time of exposing the plate. The negatives were timed by a chronometer making sidereal time, which is two hours and fifty-four minutes earlier than mean time. The following are the different times at which the pictures were made:—

	H.	M.	S.		H.	M.	S.
1	1	23	20	10 (cloudy)	5	10	24
2	1	32	9	11	5	36	54
3	1	40	57	12	Not exposed
4	1	54	11.5	13	6	5	57
5	2	2	46	14	6	14	39
6	2	41	44	15	6	22	43
7	2	51	7.5	16	6	42	6
8	3	21	5	17	6	54	35.5
9	5	1	1	18	7	59	58.5

To aid one bet or in fixing the position of the planet the sun's disk was marked with a parallel line of right ascension, which showed the course of Mercury to be all through in the sun's northern hemisphere.

THE CLOSING OBSERVATIONS.

When the planet was about to emerge from the sun the atmospheric conditions were allowed to be very good, and by using small powers on the telescopes its well defined outline could be seen in considerable detail. While taking the last observations Professors Draper and Holden were huddled close together on the step ladder close to the instruments, each with an eye intent upon the images reflected in the eyeglasses. Dr. Draper was perched near them on another step-ladder and Professor Barker was at their feet watching the reflection of Mercury on the ground glass of the camera, where it had been projected by the great telescope Mrs. Henry Draper had her stand by the chronometer, beating off the seconds and repeating them. The other parties grouped themselves around the circle, impatient to know, if possible, the results of the observations. The predicted time for the planet to emerge from the sun was (according to Washington, D. C., mean time), as follows:—

III. 5h. 37m. 18s.

IV. 5h. 40m. 25s.

The above observations, like the two that were taken when the planet was entering on the sun, were designed to show but inversely the time of first and second contact between the circumferences of the two bodies. Professor Draper was well satisfied with the concluding observations; he had observed the last contact to within 1-90 of the planet's diameter, which he ascertained to be three minutes on arc of the circle. Professor Barker's calculated time (approximately reduced) was understood to be—

III. 5h. 35m. 33s.

IV. 5h. 37m. 45s.

In the corresponding third and fourth observations (of last contact) the results registered by the other telescopes were ascertained to be:—

SIXTEEN-INCH REFLECTOR.

III. 5h. 33m. 13s.

IV. 5h. 36m. 18s.

SIX-INCH REFLECTOR.

III. 5h. 33m. 20s.

IV. 5h. 36m. 20s.

From the foregoing it will be perceived that the exact times of exterior and interior contact have not yet been reduced so as to give the data now printed the force of official authority; but the figures are within a small fraction of being the right ones.

The appearance of Mercury on the sun was black, but not so dark as had been expected.

No bright spots were observed on the dark disk of Mercury, nor was there any appearance of a satellite near the planet. No solar spots were observed; neither were solar protuberances observed.

LOCAL OBSERVATIONS BY PROFESSOR PARKHURST—A COMPLETE EXPLANATION OF THE PHENOMENA OF THE TRANSIT AND THE OBJECTS OF ASTRONOMERS IN OBSERVING IT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

The great popular interest in the transit of Mercury, which has taken place to-day, arises from its repeating, on a reduced scale, the phenomena of the transit of Venus, which will be visible here in four years from next December. In the transit of 1874, the only one that has occurred within the lifetime of this generation, astronomical expeditions were sent out by the principal civilized nations to those parts of the world where it would be best seen, and from that day to this many computers have been at work reducing the observations then taken, without having yet gleaned from them all the information which they could give with regard to the earth's distance from the sun, the elemental measure of the planetary spaces.

A phenomenon precisely similar in kind is to-day expected to yield results entirely different in their character. In observing the transit of Venus the object is to determine the sun's distance from the parallax, and this can best be done from observations of a planet which is near us, which has as large an orbit as possible and from points on the earth's surface where the parallax will be greatest. On the contrary, in the observation of the transit of Mercury, whose distance from us is so much greater and whose orbit is so much smaller, the main object is to determine the absolute position of the planet in its orbit. This planet is so difficult of observation, and its orbit is so imperfectly known, that there is a difference of about seventy seconds between the British and the American predictions of the time of the transit. The position of the planet can best be obtained by observation from points on the earth's surface where the parallax is least. The very best position for observing either contact would be that at which the sun would be vertical at the time of the contact, for there would be no parallax. But as there is an interval of more than seven hours between the first and the last contact, no one place can give this condition, even approximately, for the whole transit. Any point within the United States will divide the interval between the ingress and the egress, showing the whole transit well without leaving home, therefore American astronomers have had to-day as good an opportunity to reach useful results from the observation of the transit as if they had travelled thousands of miles to witness it.

OBJECT OF THE OBSERVATIONS.

The primary object of the observations has been to determine the position of Mercury in its orbit; but the main object has been to determine the position of the orbit itself; and this, not for its own sake, but for the purpose of ascertaining whether there is a planet revolving around the sun interior to the planet Venus. The search for this interior planet, which has been by common consent named Vulcan, has proved in vain. Astronomers have come to the conclusion that it is almost impossible that such an interior planet could exist without having been long since discovered and having had its orbit fixed. Leverrier considered it probable that such a planet does exist, and urged a special search for it, relying to a great extent upon the facts that the perihelion of the orbit of Mercury advances more rapidly than can be accounted for by the action of the known planets, indicating the existence either of an interior planet or of some zone of planets, or meteorites or other matter revolving around the sun within the orbit of Mercury. The question of to-day, then, is the verification of the fact of the actual amount of the advance of the perihelion of the orbit of Mercury.

THE PLANET'S ORBIT.

It is to be remembered that the orbit of a planet is not a material ring; it is simply the path through which the planet moves, having no more actual existence than the path of a bird in the air. The action of the planets is not upon the orbit, but upon the planet itself. The change of the orbit is as if a bird, being attracted by some object, should change its course and fly in a different direction. The path of Mercury is very nearly a circle, but the sun is not in its centre, so that at a certain point Mercury is nearer the sun than at any other; but it is found that the next time that Mercury reaches that point it moves forward about 246 miles, or one-thirteenth of its diameter, further before it begins to recede. As Mercury is approaching its aphelion the effect of a large motion if the perihelion would be to cause the planet to be further advanced in its orbit, and therefore to hasten the time of the transit. If, therefore, Mercury should be found to-day, upon a comparison of all the observations, to have appeared earlier than can be accounted for by the action of the sun and the known planets it will make it probable that there is other attracting matter yet undiscovered.

We are not to conclude that this attracting matter is a planet. The amount of matter which may exist in the protuberances and in the corona around the sun, of which we may hope to learn more in the total eclipse of the sun next July, or in the Zodiacal Light, or in streams of meteoric matter, such as give rise to meteoric showers, may be all that is required to account for the motion of Mercury.

OBSERVATIONS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY.

In accordance with the invitation of the National Observatory amateur observers have to-day, doubtless in very many places, carefully observed this transit. At some the clouds must have intervened and prevented recording the times of ingress and egress; but here, although the sky was covered with clouds most of the day, we had a clear sky at both of these important times. Our only trouble was the commotion of the atmosphere, preventing a distinct image of the planet. The modes of preparation have been various, but I will describe that which I adopted, the more fully because I believe it will be the best method for amateur observers to adopt in the observation of the approaching transit of Venus.

It has been my experience from careful comparison that I can obtain a more satisfactory view of the sun by receiving its image upon a screen than by direct vision. The screen I employed was about a foot in diameter and was supported by a wire framework. By a prism the light was reflected at right angles, so that the screen did not face the sun, but stood with its edge toward it. This made it easy to exclude the direct sunlight from falling upon the screen without the necessity for enclosing it, as is sometimes done, in a pasteboard funnel. Although not necessary, and almost useless in the afternoon from the high wind, I provided curtains to exclude from the observatory nearly all the direct sunlight around the telescope.

Reducing the aperture of the object glass to eight inches and applying a power sufficient to make the image of the entire sun a circle of forty inches in diameter and the image of Mercury one-quarter of an inch, as shown in the above diagram, the clockwork motion kept the telescope pointed at the sun, with that part of the eastern limb of the sun where Mercury was expected to appear near a line drawn across the screen tangent to the limb. There were three observers at my observatory in Brooklyn and an assistant to count the time from the chronometer. The computation from the formula in the American ephemeris indicated that the external contact would take place 10h. 16m. 36s., New York time, there being a probable delay of six or eight seconds before the indentation would be sufficient to be perceptible. At 17m. 4s. we all saw the indentation upon the limb of the sun, clear and distinct, notwithstanding the tremulous motion caused by the atmospheric disturbance, although at that moment the length of the indentation did not appear to exceed four seconds of space. As the planet entered further upon the disk the tremulousness seemed to increase, and the "black drop," so often seen in transits of Venus, became plainly visible before the internal contact. At 19 min. 36 sec. two of the observers saw the first undulation of light across this black drop, but we did not catch another glimpse of this light until seven seconds later, and in the meantime the third observer, at forty-one seconds, caught the first distinct glimpse of the light. Shortly after the clouds came up and covered the sky, forbidding further observation, except by occasional glimpses, during most of the day.

A LOCAL VIEW.

At times, as the clouds passed away, Mercury could be seen to have around it a fringe which seemed to me decidedly darker than the surface of the disc of the sun; but others seeing the same fringe, described it as yellow, and brighter than the disk. As the sun descended toward the horizon the prismatic spectrum from the refraction of our atmosphere was so strong, causing a bright red fringe on one side and a bright blue fringe upon the other, as to make it impossible to see the other which I had noted earlier. At the time of the egress it seemed almost useless to attempt observation, from the very great tremulousness of the image of the planet. Nevertheless, the three observers each made his independent record of the internal and external contact, agreeing much better than we expected. We made the internal contact 5h. 46m. 9s., and the external contact 48m. 49s. The prediction of the American Ephemeris would be for the last contact 51m. 6s. At this last internal contact, the black drop was again plainly seen.

Comparing the observed times with those derived from the Ephemeris there are several points to be noted. Instead of the time of the ingress and of the egress being 3 minutes 7 seconds we made it less than 2 minutes 43 seconds, and it did not seem possible that the difference of 24 seconds arose from our not seeing the indentation soon enough in the morning or late enough in the afternoon. Again, the duration of the transit we made less than that predicted, which would seem to indicate a path further to the north than was expected. And, finally, the whole transit appeared to be earlier than predicted, the predictions being based upon tables as early as 1848, and therefore before the later investigations of Leverrier; so that if the observations elsewhere correspond with those which we have made, and if I am right in my interpretation of the results, the "result of Le Verrier, that the action of the perihelion of Mercury is much greater than that due to the action of the known planets," is sustained.

RUSSIA'S DESIGNS.

LATEST ARRIVAL OF RUSSIAN AGENTS IN AMERICA—WHAT ARE THEY AFTER?

As announced in the HERALD of yesterday in a despatch from Baltimore, three special agents of the Russian government arrived on the steamship Germanic from Liverpool May 3 and proceeded at once about their business, which is believed by those best informed to relate to transacting the purchase and fitting out of vessels for objects of privateering. These three agents were Captain A. Grippenberg, of the Russian Navy, brother of Count Grippenberg, now on board the Cimbria at Southwest Harbor, Me., and holding, as it is generally presumed, the sealed orders of the Russian government in regard to operations from here, Mr. H. W. Hunt, of Boston, a gentleman who has spent some time in Russia and executed several important contracts for the Czar, and Mr. Paul Butler, son of General B. F. Butler, who, it is alleged, stands high in the councils of the Russian government. A HERALD reporter called at the Everett House last evening and with the aid of a clerk, whose name it is not necessary to give, interpreted the entry on the register for Saturday last of "W. McKay and two friends, Philadelphia, rooms 152 and 153," to mean Mr. William McKay, son of the great shipbuilder, of Boston, Donald McKay, and Captain A. Grippenberg and Mr. W. H. Hunt. Mr. Paul Butler signed his name in full underneath. The latter remained behind while the former party proceeded th same evening by the nine o'clock train to Washington. Their sudden leavetaking of New York was said to be on account of a despatch from the Russian Minister in Washington. Captain Kennedy, of the Germanic, on which steamer these gentlemen came over, knew nothing of their character, nor did any of his officers, even including the purser, who is ordinarily supposed to know everything about the passengers the steamer carries. When, however, they discovered yesterday who these people were they were endless in recalling incidents of the voyage where the Russian agents made themselves conspicuous, and nobody ever suspected their designs. They were foremost in the usual game of quoits on deck, and in the smoking room their merriment excelled all the rest. Between the purser and Captain Griffenberg a strong intimacy sprung up, though if the purser, who is a true John Bull, had known the precise mission of the Captain at the moment there might have been a summary end to their entente cordiale.

A FINE LOOKING FELLOW.

He took great pains in showing the Captain and Hunt over the vessel, the former having been introduced to him by the latter as an officer of the Swedish government going to America chiefly for the benefit of his health. "Well," said the purser, "he was really a fine looking, cordial fellow that you could not help liking. His style of address was of that off hand character that takes so much with Americans and Englishmen. Nothing 'stuck up' about him, as you people say. His English was not very plain, but you took such an interest in the man from his appearance and behavior that you readily understood all he said or meant to say. He went all over the ship, taking a particular interest in its entire construction and asking about the whole minutiæ of her cost for engines, coal, feed of furnaces and all these things that a man contemplating the building of a line of steamers might be supposed to inquire about."

It was noticed during the voyage that Captain Grippenberg, Mr. Hunt and Mr. Butler were constantly together, and their relations to the Russian government were such that there is hardly a doubt but that the scheme of privateering is more or less in their hands.

SIGHTING HAVANA STEAMSHIPS.

What gives additional color to the story that Russia has been at work here with the design of striking a blow at the vast commerce of England, in which she can do more damage to her than by any operations on land, is the fact that a Russian agent, who declined to give his name, visited a short time ago the office of Messrs. Alexandre & Co., the owners of the fine line of boats that ply between this city and Havana, and made a proposition for the purchase of such as were available. He simply said he wanted to buy a class of vessels of great speed. Mr. Alexandre was ready to sell if the prices offered for his ships were of the right figure. He offered to sell the City of New York, 1,715 tons, the City of Vera Cruz, 1,874 tons; the City of Merida, 1,492 tons, and the City of Mexico, 1,200 tons. The Russian agent was agreeably disappointed in finding Mr. Alexandre so freely inclined to dispose of his ships, because to him the matter of price was of small moment and he liked the ships because they were wooden, and as he expressed it, more easily repaired in case of accident than if they were built of iron. Mr. Alexandre said that most of his vessels average thirteen knots an hour and with slight changes would make quite formidable privateers—as much so as the Alabama or Florida. In regard to the steamers owned by other companies and sailing out of this port, all that can be said is this, that if there is any party in the market for steamships they will find willing sellers to willing and liberal buyers, without anything being intended as a violation of the neutrality laws.

ENGLAND'S INDIAN TROOPS.

OPINION OF A BRITISH OFFICER WHO HAS SERVED IN INDIA REGARDING THE VALUE OF THE NATIVES.

LEGGETT'S HOTEL, May 6, 1878.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Will you allow me a small space in your columns to say a word for the native soldiers of Her Majesty's army in India, who I see treated by a writer in yesterday Dispatch as half savages and a doubt expressed whether they can stand a European climate. Their fighting powers are contemptuously compared by the writer to that of the French zouaves and the Turcos Apart from the ignorance of the man, who seems to suppose the zouave to be anything but what he really is, a Frenchman, I cannot allow the remarks on this Indian army to pass me without a protest. I have had the honor to serve Her Majesty as an officer for many years, eleven of which were served in India, where I was in garrison with Her Majesty's native troops, and I can safely say that a finer body of men for drill, discipline and fighting qualities I have never seen. The two regiments of cavalry now on the seas on their way toward Malta are as fine cavalry as there are in the world. As swordsmen and horsemen they cannot be surpassed, while they are magnificently mounted and well equipped. I feel sure that the able General, Lord Napier of Magdala, who is nominated to command any army England may put into the field (should she unhappily have to go to war) has not only consented to, but has urged the employment of the native army, with whom he has served for nearly forty years, and in whose loyalty and courage he knows he can depend, and who I believe will prove, when led on by their European officers, as good troops as any in the world. There need be little fear on the score of climate. Indian climate alone offers sufficient varieties of temperature to test the endurance of the soldiers. In the North of the Punjab the soldiers in the winter are clothed in sheepskin coats, much the same as they would wear in winter in Europe. The way in which the ill clothed ship Lascars brave out the cold when they are in European seas is a sufficient proof that the natives can stand the winter. Your obedient servant,

W. WYNDHAM.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

A BRAVE MINER STONED TO DEATH WHILE DEFENDING AN OLD MAN AGAINST RUFFIANS.

SCRANTON, May 6, 1878.

John Paull, a miner formerly living in Dunsmore, one of the suburbs of this city, died this morning from the result of injuries sustained on Tuesday last, when he had his skull battered in by stones while defending an old man from the fury of a gang of ruffians. This terrible scene was enacted at five o'clock in the afternoon on the open street, in front of Dupuy's hotel at Dunmore, and was witnessed by forty men, too terror stricken to interfere. The affray originated in Dupuy's hotel. A desperado, named Jack Costello, and another named McHugh, entered and called for drinks. They refused to pay for them and spoke threateningly to the barkeeper, a feeble old man named Layton. Costello drew a razor from his pocket and pushed his way into the hotel parlor, where about half a dozen men were seated. His presence created a panic and most of the party hastened from the place as quickly as possible, while others remonstrated with him and succeeded in prevailing on him to put away the razor in his hip pocket.

LAYTON ATTACKED.

Costello and his companion went into the street again, and finding the old barkeeper standing outside the door they attacked him, endeavoring to throw him over an adjoining fence. At this juncture John Paull, a peaceable miner living in the neighborhood, who came to the drug store to get medicine for one of his children who was dying with scarlet fever, interfered, requesting the ruffians to let the old man alone.

A BRAVE MAN'S FATE.

Then they attacked Paull and a terrible fight took place. He knocked them down repeatedly, and, although battered with stones, never fell once during the melée himself. About half a dozen of Costello's companions joined in the bloody assault, which lasted nearly half an hour, and poured a shower of stones upon Paull. The fight occurred in the middle of the street and was carried on from one end of the block to the other. All this time Paull was alone. At last Paull staggered into a neighboring house, and was not there many minutes before he was seized with convulsions.

A CRUSHED SKULL.

The doctors found the skull fearfully battered in a little above the left ear, another wound appeared above the right and the back of the head was also gashed and torn. Several pieces of the skull were removed by Dr. O'Brien, and it seemed as if Paull might live.

A STRICKEN FAMILY.

To add to his great sorrow, however, the sick child for whom he had gone on an errand when attacked died on Friday, and two other children were seized with the fever, which he himself caught a little before his death. His wife has also since been attacked by the fever, and is not expected to recover.

Paull's murderers made their escape on the night of the tragedy.

THE STATE CAPITAL.

THE SENATE VENTILATING THE BILL OF THE SOCIETY FOR THE PREVENTION OF CRIME—VETOES BY THE GOVERNOR—AN ACT TO ABOLISH THE INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

ALBANY, May 6, 1878.

The uninteresting character of the proceedings of the Assembly to-night is regarded as a lull before the storm. The important movement against the Governor's veto of the Bonded Indebtedness bill, the Conference Committee on the amended Public Burden's bill and the effort to secure a new code commission are all promised as part of to-morrow's work. The energy of the members was conserved to-night in order to be able to meet these emergencies to-morrow.

PREVENTION OF CRIME.

The Senate held an animated session and consumed most of the evening in debate on the bill incorporating the Society for the Prevention of Crime. On motion of Senator Ecclesine section 8, which reads:—"One-half of the fines and one-half of the penalties collected by the aid of or through the instrumentality of the said society or its agents for violations of the law shall accrue and be paid for the benefit of the said society," was stricken out. A motion to reconsider this vote gave rise to a debate, which lasted until eleven o'clock, and was finally lost. Ecclesine sought to have Kings and New York counties exempted from the operation of section 9, which reads, "The provisions of this act shall be general within the boundaries of the State," but the effort failed. During the debate it was explained that if the society accumulated one-half the moneys collected from fines for violation of the Excise law, it would in twenty years be a more powerful organization than the East India Company.

VETOES.

The Governor sent to the Senate two vetoes this evening, one of the bill extending the time for the sale of the Genesee Valley Canal and of the bill authorizing the County Judge of Allegany to appoint four constables.

THE INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

The following is a copy of the bill of Mr. Sessions, introduced in the Senate to-night, abolishing the Insurance Department:—

SECTION 1.—The act entitled "An act to establish an insurance department," passed April 15, 1859, and section 1 of the act of April 20, 1861, and the act to provide for the incorporation of life and health insurance companies, passed April 17, 1862, and the act of April 25, 1871, and the amendatory act of May 22, 1873, are all hereby repealed.

SEC. 2.—The act authorizing life insurance companies to make special deposits of securities in the Insurance Department, to require special reports of said companies, passed April 24, 1867, and the act of May 18, 1869, are hereby repealed, saving all rights which have accrued and all trusts and obligations which have been lawfully incurred under such acts, and for the protection of such rights and the fulfilment of such trusts the Treasurer of the State is authorized to take possession of all deposits and securities hitherto made in the Insurance Department under such acts, and to hold such securities in trust for the use and purposes for which they were deposited, exercising the same powers and performing the same duties with regard to such deposits as are assigned by the said acts to the Superintendent of the Insurance Department.

SEC. 3.—Whenever by any law not repealed by this act, any insurance company is required to deposit any securities or money in the Insurance Department, such deposit is hereby required or permitted to be made in the Treasury of the State, subject to all the conditions and provisions of such law, and the Treasurer is hereby authorized and required to receive such deposits and to perform all the duties in regard to them which under such laws might have been performed by the Superintendent of the Insurance Department.

SEC. 4.—Whenever by any law of the State not repealed by this act, any powers are granted to the Superintendent of the Insurance Department or any duties imposed upon such Superintendent other than those assigned by sections 2 and 3 of this act to the State Treasurer such powers are hereby granted to and such duties imposed upon the Secretary of State.

OWEN MURPHY'S TREASURE.

Speaker Husted introduced a bill which will no doubt delight the hearts of many of the retail liquor dealers of Gotham. It provides that the Mayor of New York be empowered and authorized to receive moneys paid to the Excise Commissioners of the city during the year 1877, by persons applying for licenses and to whom no licenses have been granted, from those who now have the custody of such moneys, and that he be authorized to distribute the same equitably to and among the parties who shall in his judgment be entitled to the same. The bill was read a third time and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

SEVENTH REGIMENT VETERANS.

The bill incorporating the veterans of the Seventh regiment was passed.

JUDGES' COMPENSATION.

The passage of the bill directing the Boards of Supervisors of the several counties in the Third Judicial district to annually appropriate the sum of $10,000 to be applied to the payment of salaries of justices of the Supreme Court of the district in addition to the compensation now allowed by law, was moved, but as it received only sixty-one votes it was declared lost. Mr. Bergen made a motion that the vote be reconsidered and that the motion be laid on the table. Carried.

RECEIVER'S REPORTS.

Mr. McDonough's bill concerning receivers was passed to-night. It provides that all receivers of corporations heretofore appointed by order of any court or judge, and not discharged from the duties of their respective trusts, and all receivers that may hereafter be so appointed, shall at least once in every six months during the continuance of their respective trusts file with the Secretary of State, under oath, a report of their proceedings as such receivers; the first report to be made by each receiver shall contain a particular description of all property that may have come into his possession as such receiver, and each succeeding report shall contain a statement of the property remaining on hand at the time of the last preceding report, and in addition thereto, a statement of all property that may in the meantime have come into his hands as such receiver. Such reports shall also contain a statement of all dividends that have been paid during the period covered by the report, a statement of all disbursements or payments made during such period and what disposition has been made of any property that may have come into his possession as such receiver, together with the reason and authority for such disbursements, payments and disposition of property. Any receiver failing to make the report provided for shall be removed by the Court or Judge making the appointment upon the application of any stockholder, bondholder or creditor of the corporation of which he may be the receiver. Any receiver wilfully making any false statement in any of the reports shall, upon conviction, be adjudged guilty of perjury in the first degree, and shall be punished accordingly. The Secretary of State shall, during the month of January in each year report, to the Legislature what receivers have complied with this act, together with a copy of all the reports made by said receivers.

At ten o'clock Mr. Grady, of New York, offered a resolution concerning the memory of the late Felix Murphy, ex-member of Assembly from the Second New York district, and asked that out of respect to deceased the House adjourn, which was carried.

CLOSING ITS DOORS.

THE COMMERCE INSURANCE COMPANY ABOUT TO WIND UP ITS AFFAIRS.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Commerce Insurance Company of this city was held last week at the company's office, No. 175 Broadway. The advisability of closing the doors of the organization was then discussed, and most of the gentlemen present were of the opinion that the existence of the company should be terminated. The reason for this movement was the unsettled state of the insurance business in the past, the depression of the present and the unfavorable outlook of the future.

The company was organized in 1859. Its officers are Duncan McDougall, president, and William E. Hoxie, secretary. The last statement was made on January 1, 1878. The capital was stated at $200,000, the assets at $240,379 and the surplus at $2,008. Mr. McDougall has been president for four years. He was formerly a stockholder.

A HERALD reporter called upon Mr. McDougall at his residence last evening. That gentlemen said that for some time past the company had been going quietly along, the times not permitting any profits to be made. It had been paying its stockholders out of the surplus; but this had now dwindled down, and it was thought advisable to close the company's doors. A law lately passed enabled the directors to consolidate with another company if they chose, and perhaps this consolidation might take place. There were two parties among the directors, one advocating the closing of the company's doors the other favoring a consolidation with some stronger company. The former, comprising many of the heaviest stockholders, were in the majority, and hence consolidation was only a possibility. The present condition of the company's affairs, Mr. McDougall added, was about the same as when the statement was made in January last. There was no defaulting and no losses to stockholders. The company was solvent and perfectly able and willing to pay all it owed. The stockholders knew they would realize the full amount they had invested, and this led them to desire the closing of the organization rather than its continuance by consolidation. Were the company able to pay only a part of its indebtedness there would be the desire on the part of the stockholders to join with another company in the hope of regaining the full amount invested.

THE ASSETS.

The assets were very good. The greater part were in government bonds and the rest in a mortgage which was worth in the neighborhood of double the amount. Mr. McDougall further said this action of the directors was but natural, as very few of the insurance companies were prospering, their dividends being paid out of surpluses got together in brighter times than the present. Should it be definitely decided upon to close the company's doors a small amount would cover the expenses of the winding up. The company's business was almost entirely local and its risks were slight. It had paid a five per cent dividend in every six months until within the last six months, except on one occasion—viz., the Boston fire, when the company lost heavily, and an assessment was made and promptly paid by the stockholders. To sum up, the winding up is an outcome of the hard times, but the doors will be closed with no one likely to be a loser.

The property is now in the hands of Stephen Lent, to whom the company has made an assignment, and he is making an inventory of the assets. Their works are at Peekskill, and the officials of the company are wealthy men of Peekskill, Daniel J. Haight being the President. They have good assets and will no doubt pay a large percentage to the creditors.

John R. Smith and Asher D. Ensign, composing the firm of Smith & Ensign, produce commission merchants, of No. 304 Greenwich street, and agents for the Patrons of Husbandry, have been adjudicated voluntary bankrupts by Register Ketchum. In the County Clerk's office there were filed yesterday the assignments of Jacob Frieauf to James J. Coogan and of Vincent Dill to John M. McLoughlin.

At a meeting of the creditors of Samuel A. Magnus, dealer in glue at No. 307 Pearl street, held at the office of Register Allen, a composition was accepted at thirty-cents on the dollar, twenty-seven and a half cents in cash and the balance in four months.

Mr. Edward H. Cole was chosen chairman and Mr. J. H. Goldy secretary. A statement of the affairs of the company was presented showing liabilities amounting to $168,000 and assets $266,000. An explanation of the various items was made and an offer to compromise at fifty cents on the dollar was submitted. After considerable interchange of views the matter was referred to a committee of three, composed of Messrs. A. H. Daine, J. H. Baldwin and L. Lissburger, who are to make an examination and report at a future meeting. The company have already commenced composition proceedings before Register Dwight.

KEILER, WORMSER AND KINGSBURY.

A large part of yesterday was occupied in the Supreme Court, Chambers, in the argument of three motions for the appointment of a receiver of the Keiler, Wormser & Kingsbury firm. Mr. Keiler made the first application upon the ground—first—that Wormser and Kingsbury had withdrawn a part of the firm's funds from one of the firm's banks and deposited it in another bank without his authority or consent; second, that Kingsbury had manufactured notes and used them as business notes; and third, that the partners could not agree in the management of the business. Messrs. Wormser and Kingsbury, represented by Messrs. Joseph H. Choate, Luther R. Marsh, W. F. Shephard, G. A. Seixas and D. Leventritt, answered by accusing Mr. Keiler of having withdrawn the firm's bank account from the Pacific Bank and of having borrowed money from employés and others, thereby impairing the credit and standing of the firm. They also read a number of affidavits attacking the character of Mr. Keiler. Mr. Keiler read an answer to these charges, admitting having drawn the money from the Pacific Bank and alleging that he did so under the advice of his counsel, Mr. Newcombe, in consequence of his partners' having withdrawn the other account of his firm and preventing him from drawing thereon, and that he held the money drawn, and intended to hold it, subject to an accounting to be had. He also admitted having borrowed money privately and upon his own credit, but introduced written acknowledgments of Wormser for moneys loaned to him by a son-in-law of Mr. Keiler, and that the firm's condition was such that they often borrowed money, except Mr. Kingsbury, who, Mr. Keiler alleges, had no occasion for doing so, having no family and his wife and himself living with his wife's mother.

The real contest appears to be who shall be receiver, Wormser and Kingsbury both asking for the appointment to be made to them jointly, and Mr. Keiler warmly opposing this, urging that if they got hold of his property there will be but small hope for him. Mr. Keiler was represented by ex-Judge Cardy and Mr. R. S. Newcombe. Judge Donohue took the papers and reserved his decision.

EAST RIVER BRIDGE.

MONTHLY MEETING OF TRUSTEES—THE BRIDGE AND RAPID TRANSIT.

The regular monthly meeting of the trustees of the East River Bridge was held yesterday afternoon at the company's office in Water street, Brooklyn, Mr. Henry C. Murphy in the chair. The minutes of the meeting of the Executive Committee held April 12 were read. At that meeting it was reported that the committee appointed to complete the purchase of the property on Cliff street, Frankfort and Jacob streets in this city, belonging to Henry A. Burr, had done so at a cost of $117,600. The minutes were adopted. President Murphy stated before the committee that proposals had been invited for 10,000 barrels of cement, with the right to increase the amount to 50,000. It was ordered that the officers be authorized to award the contract at eighty-four and a half cents. The financial report for the month of April showed the receipts to have been $402,886 80. Of this sum $100,000 was received from this city and $300,000 from Brooklyn. The expenditures for the same period amounted to $154,540 49.

Mr. Kinsella then offered the following resolution:—

Whereas there are a number of projects under consideration in Brooklyn looking to the obtaining of rapid transit between the outlying districts of that city and New York; and whereas rapid, convenient and at all times certain communication between the two cities will be feasible only by bringing any scheme of rapid transit in Brooklyn in harmony with that adopted for steam transit on the East River Bridge; therefore,

Resolved, That a committee of five from this Board be appointed to confer with any other body or corporation having for its purpose the construction or running of a rapid transit or steam road to either terminus of the bridge, to the end that the bridge shall fully realize the main object of its construction—the facilitation of intercourse between the two cities—and to report the result of such conferences to this Board.

The resolution was adopted, and President Murphy appointed the following trustees as members of the committee:—Thomas Kinsella, Dr. Samuel Hall, J. S. T. Stranahan, Thomas Hitchcock and William C. Kingsley.

A communication in reference to the suspended ironwork of the superstructure from the Chief Engineer was then read by President Murphy. It stated that 58,000 tons of iron were needed for the work and that the contract was the most important one of any to be given out.

CITY NUISANCES.

RECORDER HACKETT'S CHARGE TO THE GRAND JURY.

Recorder Hackett opened the May Term of Part 1 of the Court of General Sessions yesterday, Mr. Francis H. Amidon, of No. 220 Fifth avenue, having been chosen foreman of the Grand Jury. After having alluded to the usual statutory provisions the Recorder said:—

Gentlemen of the Grand Jury—I desire to call your especial attention to the controversy between citizens and the Health Board about foul and pestilential odors that are claimed to pervade the central part of our city and island, and which, while annoying the wealthy, do positively destroy the health of their fellow citizens less fortunate in matters of prosperity who live nearest to the factories. If you shall find wilful negligence of duty in the Health Commissioners you may indict them, and the question can be tested whether any permits whatsoever ought to be given to a business that is liable to become, and confessedly does sometimes become, a public nuisance. Science is very useful always, but sometimes it happens that its microscope becomes more technical than legal or beneficial. The Court of Appeals in the prosecution against an old Police Board for neglect of duty held it maintainable even where the defence of the official was an honest misconstruction of law under legal advice. (New York Reports, vol. 62, p. 203.) The law, nevertheless, must not be technically violated to public prejudice. It was my intention a year ago to have called the attention of a Grand Jury to these then alleged nuisances of vile odors because my own family and myself had been victims to and sufferers from the same, as also I believe that of my immediate neighbor, the present eloquent Corporation Counsel; but motives of delicacy restrained me, lest my action should be misconstrued. But now, by the action of the committee of citizens, by the public views of two honorable Judges of the Court of Oyer and Terminer, by the tone of the united press, and by the strange professional rigor of the Board of Health, I am relieved from any misconstruction of my present action. I therefore most earnestly request your immediate and critical examination of the whole matter, although I, of course, cannot be a judge to try such an indictment, because, perhaps interested in abating the nuisance.

SIDEWALK OBSTRUCTIONS.

Gentlemen, there is still another great and increasing public nuisance sanctioned by city officials. The Board of Aldermen at every session authorize the erection of booths, stands, racks and other various encumbrances in the public streets of this city. This a section (section 17 No. 4) of the present charter forbids and expressly prohibits, which I now read to you:—It shall be the duty of the Common Council "to prevent encroachments upon, and obstructions to, the streets, highways, roads and public places, not including parks, and to authorize and require the Commissioner of Public Works to remove the same, but they shall have no power to authorize the placing or continuing of any encroachment or obstruction upon any street or sidewalk except the temporary occupation thereof during the erection or repair of a building on a lot opposite the same." Prior to this charter provision the Board of Aldermen could legally have given licenses to sidewalk obstructions. Last week a communication of the Commissioner of Public Works and a Mayor's veto brought the subject to my notice. I earnestly invite your co-operation with them even although you should have to apply to the Aldermen, the Court of Appeals law that I have referred to.

The Grand Jurors then retired to their deliberations.

PETITIONING THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

The following letter and petition have been sent to the President of the Board of Health, the signers of the petition being 136 business men and householders living along the avenues in the vicinity of Thirty-ninth street and the North River.

New York, May 4, 1878.

Sir—Persons inform this association that it "avails not" to complain to the Board of Health of the nauseating odors that come from the Algonquin and other nuisances. Yet, on their behalf, I submit to you the enclosed petition. Your obedient servant,

THOMAS B. MUSGRAVE, Chairman.

The petitioners say:—

We have suffered greatly from the bad smells arising from the bone, fat and offal rendering establishments on and near North River and Eleventh avenue, from Thirty-sixth to Fortieth street. The stench often fills the air so as to be almost unendurable, and we respectfully request the Board of Health to put a stop to it.

W. M. TWEED TO THE CITY.

The following letter was yesterday sent to Comptroller Kelly by one of William M. Tweed's counsel:—

New York, May 6, 1878.

My Dear Sir—I take the liberty of delivering the enclosed documents to you as Comptroller of the city and county of New York, for the benefit of the city and county, in accordance with the wishes of my late client, Mr. William M. Tweed. He wished the delivery made in fulfilment of his offer of surrender last year, and to you because he said you were the only official who had publicly asked that good faith be kept with him. The documents accompanying this are:—First, the deed in blank of the Putnam water property, of inestimable value to your city, and second, the assignment in blank of the half of the Sheriff O'Brien claim of $300,000 against the city and the original assignment from Sheriff O'Brien. Very sincerely your obedient servant,

Hon. John Kelly. WILLIAM EDELSTEN.

The Putnam water property is conveyed by S. Foster Dewey, to whom it was originally handed over by Tweed. This property consists of about one hundred and thirty acres of land in the town of Carmel, near Crosbie's Pond, Putnam county, together with mills and other buildings.

The O'Brien claim was placed in evidence during the Tweed investigation before the Aldermen, a copy being published at the time.

MUNICIPAL NOTES.

Mayor Ely had not made up his mind yesterday as to sending in the name of a Police Commissioner in place of Mr. Wheeler, whose term of office expired on May 1. A regular meeting of the Board of Aldermen will be held to-day.

Ex-Secretary of State Bigelow called at the Mayor's office yesterday and complained that his name had been used in the circulars of several bogus mining corporations. He wanted information as to what course should be pursued under the circumstances. Mr. Bigelow was directed to lay his grievances before the District Attorney.

Alderman Morris yesterday received a communication from Messrs. Peabody and Baker on behalf of a number of lawyers who desire to present to the city a medallion of David Graham, formerly District Attorney of this county. A request is made that the medallion be placed in one of the court rooms. The communication will be referred to the Aldermanic Committee on County Affairs.

City Chamberlain Tappan's statement for the past week is as follows:—Balance April 30, $5,453,813 76; receipts, $5,347,542 01; payments, $7,166,925 18; balance May 4, $3,058,430 59.

PARDONED BY THE GOVERNOR.

Charles F. Blandin, who was some time ago convicted in the Court of General Sessions of selling an obscene picture and sentenced to three months' imprisonment, has been pardoned by Governor Robinson. The accused was a young lawyer from Boston, and while canvassing for stationery and printing called at the office of Anthony Comstock, in Nassau street. Here Joseph Britton, one of the agents of the society, negotiated for the purchase of some pictures, and Blandin returned with one which he said he had received from a friend in Boston. Britton paid him thirty cents for it, and Mr. Comstock thereupon caused his arrest. At the trial the accused was gratuitously defended by Mr. Benjamin F. Russell, who insisted that his client had been entrapped by the agents of the Society for the Prevention of Crime. Under the law, however, the jury returned a verdict of guilty, with a strong recommendation to mercy, and Judge Sutherland imposed the lowest possible sentence. A great deal of sympathy was expressed for Blandin, and the Judge, the foreman of the Grand Jury and the jury who convicted him signed a petition for his pardon. This petition was taken to Albany by Mr. Russell, and, departing from the usual custom of not granting pardons during the session of the Legislature, Governor Robinson, having fully investigated the case, granted a full pardon.

DIRECTOR HALSTED'S TRIAL.

The trial of ex-Director-at-Large Halsted, of the Hudson County Board of Chosen Freeholders, indicted for malfeasance in office in signing bonds illegally for the purchase of a new Court House site, was resumed in the Court of Oyer and Terminer at Jersey City yesterday, before Judge Knapp. The Court denied the motion to quash the indictment, and the entire day was consumed by Mr. Pitney and ex-Governor Bedle, counsel for the defence, who argued that even though Mr. Halsted did sign the resolution for the payment of $225,000 when there was no appropriation he was not amenable to the law. Mr. Pitney, in his argument, insisted that no guilt could be proved, but Judge Knapp reminded him that the Freeholders who voted for the purchase and were indicted pleaded guilty. The plea that Mr. Halsted was not a member of the Board of Freeholders, but held a distinctive office, with peculiar duties and responsibilities, was not tenable, for it required his consent to consummate any act of the Board. It was a narrow construction of the law to assume that he was not a member of the Board. Counsel for the defence took exception, and the case proceeded. Ex-Governor Bedle had not concluded his argument when the Court adjourned, and he will resume his address this morning, after which Attorney General Stockton will reply.

THE LAW OF LIBEL.

JUDGMENT REVERSED BY THE SUPREME COURT IN THE SUIT OF PHŒBE ROBERTSON AGAINST THE HERALD.

The General Term of the Supreme Court yesterday rendered an important decision touching the law of libel in the suit some time ago brought by Phœbe Robertson against the Herald. The action was brought to recover $10,000 damages for an alleged libellous publication in the Herald of the 19th of November, 1876. The matter complained of grew out of an advertisement published which, it was charged, reflected upon the character of the plaintiff and damaged her business as a boarding house keeper. The answer to the complaint denied any intentional or malicious injury, and also alleged that the plaintiff was not the real party in interest. It was further asserted that the publication was true in substance and that the same primarily grew out of a quarrel between the plaintiff and her daughter and certain other parties, some of whom caused the publication to be made. It was further stated that, although a retraction was consented to by the defendant, yet the plaintiff, who expressed her willingness to withdraw the suit if such was made, was not permitted to do so. On the trial below, the jury, notwithstanding the voluminous proofs on the part of the defendant, gave a verdict for the plaintiff for $10,000 damages. From this an appeal was taken yesterday in General Term. Chief Justice Curtis, writing the opinion, reverses this verdict and orders a new trial. The Chief Justice, in the course of an elaborate opinion, discusses the evidence at great length and then goes on to say:—

THE CHIEF JUSTICE'S REMARKS.

A grave question arises as to whether there was not testimony received at the trial which should have been excluded. A witness, Meredith L. Jones, Esq., counsellor at law, testified to the effect that shortly after the 1st of January, 1877, he was recommended to the plaintiff's boarding house and made an examination of the rooms and prices, and expected if he had gone there to pay $28 per week for second floor back of No. 51, and when asked why he did not go to the house he answered: "Well, my wife called my attention to a publication, something about a blackmailing crowd at Nos. 51 and 53 West Twenty-fifth street." He also testified that it led him to hesitate about going there, and that he did not go there. Upon his cross-examination he testified that he did not remember what newspaper it was, that he thought it was in the legal columns, the reports of the courts. The publication complained of was in the "Personal" column of the Herald of November, 19, 1876. The defendant moved to strike out the testimony of this witness, on the ground that it did not appear to relate to the libel complained of. This motion was denied, the Court stating "it has no effect in binding you, but simply giving what he heard," and the defendant excepted. There was no evidence connecting the defendant with this publication made after January 1, 1877, which, in fact, was the report of a legal proceeding between these parties and published in another newspaper. The testimony of the witness when it appeared that he did not remember in what newspaper he saw the words that led him to hesitate about going to board at the plaintiff's house, or not to go there should have been stricken out pursuant to the defendant's motion. The defendant can only be called on to respond for his own publication and the damages caused by it. If another newspaper published the report of a legal proceeding in this cause that prejudiced the plaintiff this defendant is not liable for that. If such publication was unlawful the plaintiff is entitled to redress from that publication; if lawful she is without remedy.

SHOULD HAVE BEEN STRICKEN OUT.

As soon as it was apparent that the injuries which the witness testified the plaintiff herself sustained in her business from his attention being called to a publication respecting his boarding house was not occasioned by the publication complained of in this suit, but by another, the motion to strike out this testimony should have been granted. If it appeared that the testimony did not prejudice the defendant and that the jury were misinformed by its remaining before them subject, to what was stated by the Court at the time of the denial of the motion to strike it out, the defendant's objection to it would be answered. But it is difficult to take this view of it. The testimony of this witness remained before them. There is nothing to indicate that they were to exclude it wholly from their consideration. Is it probable they drew the distinction in determining the plaintiff's damages between such as were caused by the publication in the defendant's paper and such as were caused by publications in other journals, and which, as reports of legal proceedings, were lawful? Can it be determined that the legal rights of the defendant were not prejudiced and the jury influenced to some extent adversely to him by this evidence? These questions cannot easily be satisfactorily answered in the negative. It is better to declare by the rules of evidence by which all parties are protected than to sustain a departure from them on grounds that are not clearly triable. The judgment and order appealed from should be reversed and a new trial granted, with costs to abide the event.

Judge Sanford concurs in the opinion of the Court. Mr. William W. Badger appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. John Townshend represented the Herald.

THE FLOWER AND FRUIT MISSION.

AN EXAMPLE OF THE WORK DONE BY ONE OF NEW YORK'S NOBLEST CHARITIES.

The first distribution this season at the Flower and Fruit Mission occurred yesterday. This beautiful charity has been in operation since 1870, and has given the greatest pleasure to many thousands of people. There are many charities which cater to the necessities of man, but few that, like this, appeal to his love of the beautiful. The members tell many touching anecdotes of the delight and gratitude of the recipients of a bunch of flowers. Not only flowers but fruits and vegetables, are distributed by this society. The latter are given to the poor in tenement houses, who seldom taste a fresh vegetable. The mission was open yesterday from ten till one o'clock, and, though there were a great many busy ladies present, a great many more were needed. The principal flowers were lilacs, lilies of the valley, and blossoms of apple and pear and peach. Notwithstanding that there were barely enough fair hands to arrange the flowers, 4,000 bouquets were made up and distributed among the following places:—

Hospitals—Bellevue, Chambers Street, Charity, Cripples', Colored, Children's (Randall's); Convalescent (Hart's); Emigrants Hahnemann, Homœopathic, Incurables, German, Female Insane, Male Insane, Nursery and Child's, New York, Ophthalmic, Orthopædic, Roosevelt, Smallpox, St. Elizabeth's, St. Mary's, St. Luke's, St. Francis', St. Vincent's, Presbyterian, Woman's, Mount Sinai.

Homes—Baptist, Chapin, Jewish, Methodist, St. Luke's, St. Joseph's, St. Barnabas', Holy Communion, Trinity, Isaac Hopper, Presbyterian, Christian, Samaritan, Peabody, Little Sisters of the Poor, For Aged Women, For Friendless Girls, For the Friendless, For Aged Couples, For Old Ladies.

Missions—Bethany Institute, Calvary Chapel, Covenant, Crosby Street, Cherry Street, Five Points, Grace, German, House of Industry, Knox Memorial, Midnight, Olivet, Stanton Street, St. Augustine, Union, Water Street.

Miscellaneous—Almshouse, Blind Asylum, Deaf Mutes, Destitute Blind, Foundling Asylum, Christian Association, Eye and Ear Infirmary, Girls' Lodging House, Half Orphan Asylum, dispensaries, Ludlow Street Jail, Magdalen Asylum, Newsboys' Lodging House, Sing Sing Prison, Trinity Infirmary, Training School for Nurses, Tombs, Woman's Infirmary, orphan asylums, Workhouse; also to several industrial schools. Eleven thousand distributions of fruit and flowers were made to the sick in tenement houses during the past year.

The actual expenses of carrying on the mission for the past eight years have only been a little over $125. Donations of fruit or money should be addressed to Miss Russell, Secretary Flower and Fruit Mission, No. 239 Fourth avenue. Assistance in making up and distributing the flowers is very much needed, and charitably inclined ladies could find no better way to spend a few hours a week than in this work. The ladies of the mission, in their report just published, say:—

> So many inquiries have been made as to the best method of packing and forwarding both flowers and fruit that we repeat here the directions already given to out of town friends:—Cover the bottom of your box or basket with a newspaper or a few ferns or leaves. Tie the flowers together in bunches, each kind by itself, and pack them in layers separated by papers; the upper layer should be sprinkled and covered closely with newspaper to exclude the air as much as possible. A simple wooden box, fastened with a strap, is easily procured. It is almost air-tight and forms one of the best means of conveyance. A pasteboard box will answer the purpose almost as well and saves us the trouble of returning it. Fruit should be packed, if possible, in a basket or tin box; never mixed with the flowers.
>
> All boxes and bakets which are to be returned to the senders should have clearly painted on them, in addition to the directions, the words "Return to Mrs. ——," with the full address. All packages should be given to the express agent on board the train, who has orders to forward them to New York free of charge. All kinds of flowers are acceptable, but lilacs, bond lilies, roses, honeysuckles and geranium leaves seem to be the greatest favorites. It is suggested to those who occasionally send flowers made up into bouquets ready for distribution that the bouquets should be small, the stems should not be cut off too short, and that if possible a sweet flower should be put into each one. The cry always is, "Give us something with a smell, please!"

The next distribution day will be Thursday, the 9th.

THE "BROKEN BANKER."

A few weeks ago the extreme destitution of the family of a gentleman who was up to quite a recent date in the enjoyment of an ample fortune was called to the public attention through the Herald. His case is one that deserves the consideration of the well to do who are charitably inclined, investigation having shown that the story of his past wealth and of his present distress is but too true. At one time he was a regular and liberal contributor to the funds of St. John's Guild, which itself is now unable to return his past liberality by generous assistance. One small contribution was received at the Herald office for the distressed family some weeks ago, and yesterday $2 was received in a note signed "E. W." Contributions for the relief of the family received at this office will be promptly forwarded to the "Broken Banker."

DEATH OF LEAMINGTON.

The Sire of Enquirer, Lynchburg, Littleton, Longfellow, Reform and Parole.

AT CHESTNUT HILL, PHILADELPHIA.

The grand thoroughbred racehorse and sire, Leamington, died at the home of his owner, Mr. A. Welch, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, yesterday morning. Until a few moments before his death the horse appeared to be in the most robust health. His death, it is thought, must have been occasioned either by apoplexy or rupture of the heart. Leamington was foaled in 1853 and at the time of his death was twenty-five years old.

Leamington was bred by Mr. Halford, of England, and imported to America in 1865 by R. W. Cameron, of Clifton Stud Farm, Staten Island, N. Y. He was sired by Faugh-a-Ballagh; first dam by Pantaloon; second dam Daphne, by Laurel; third dam Maid of Honor, by Champion; fourth dam Etiquette, by Orville; fifth dam Boadicea, by Alexander; sixth dam Brunette, by Ancaster Starling; ninth dam by Grasshopper; tenth dam by Sir M. Newton's Arabian; eleventh dam by Pert; twelfth dam by St. Martins; thirteenth dam by Sir E. Hale's Arabian; fourteenth dam the Old Field mare. Faugh-a-Ballagh, the sire of Leamington, bred by Mr. G. Knox, in 1841, was a full brother to the celebrated Irish Birdcatcher, by Sir Hercules, out of Guccioli, by Bob Booty; Flight, by Irish Escape; Young Heroine, by Bagot; Heroine (Tom Turf's dam), by Hero; Snap, sister to Regulus. The Pantaloon mare, the dam of Leamington, had no turf career; but as a brood mare she produced seven others besides Leamington.

Leamington was a dark brown horse, full sixteen hands and an inch in height. He had a beautiful head and neck, fine eyes and good shoulders, fine back, great length, and was as perfect from the point of the hip to the whirlbone, and from thence back to the hock, as any horse in the country. With a very round barrel, it gave him the appearance of having a light middle piece. His hind leg was a pattern, and he was best there, where many of the English horses are deficient. He had most excellent bone, and this he transmitted to most of his offspring. His right hind foot, from the hoof to the pastern, was white, and a large white star set off his expressive and blood-like head. Soon after his arrival in this country Mr. Cameron sent him over to the Passaic race course at Paterson, and although he showed the severity of the sea voyage which he had undergone he was universally proclaimed the best specimen of a high class race horse that ever appeared in this section of the country. There were a great many horsemen from the South and West at the time, and comparisons were made between him and Glencoe, Leviathan, Sovereign, Yorkshire, Albion, Margrave and other importations; but the best judges who had seen the others all gave the palm to Leamington.

Leamington began his racing career as a two-year-old at Warwick, March 19, 1855, and this was a win. Four other races were run by him, scoring three misses and a win. He ran ten times as a three-year-old, five times as a four-year-old, once as a five-year-old and three times as a six-year-old. He started twenty-four times, won eight, lost sixteen and paid forfeit once. His total winnings on the turf were £6,830. Leamington went to the stud in 1860, and made the seasons of 1860, '61, '62, '63, '64 and '65 at Rawcliff Paddocks. The first of his get appeared in 1863, three of them running four races. In 1864 he had thirteen winners, who won thirty-three races; 1865, eleven winners, who won fifteen races; 1867, fifteen winners, who won twenty-eight races; 1868, ten winners, who won nineteen races, and in 1869 five winners who won nine races. The following comprise some of his principal winners in England:—Coup d'Etat, Catalogue, Procelin, Tarlatan, Bella, Club Queen, Hark Forward, Lady of Coverdale, Lady Selton, Lady Warwick, Leicester Lemonade, Queen of Crystal, Warwick, Boleno, Fitzroy, Fortunatus, Lady Constance, Bird of Eve, Cheltenham, Cora, Foreign Stamp, Lady Eston, Rebecca, Ruperra, Variation, Catiline, Esmeralda, Reltub, Scipio, Thankful, Avon, Belle of Warwick, Citron, Haymaker, Miss Theo and Percussion.

Mr. R. W. Cameron purchased Leamington after the season of 1865, from the Rawcliffe Company, for £1,575, and had him brought over the same season in the steamship Celia, from London. He made his first season in Kentucky, at the Barque Bonita Stud Farm of General A. Buford, at $200. After that season in Kentucky he was brought North and stood the seasons of 1867, 1868 and 1869 at Clifton Stud Farm, on Staten Island. In the fall of 1869 Mr. Cameron sold Leamington to Mr. A. Welch. He made the season of 1870 at Paterson. From that time to the present Leamington has had his home at Chestnut Hill, near Philadelphia, where, with a limited number of good mares, he has made his name famous in the land.

The death of this horse, although a serious loss to Mr. Welch, will not fall so heavily, as he has three gallant sons to take the place of the old hero on the farm. These are Reform, James A. and Lyttleton. They are a great family of winners. During seven years there has been scarcely a stake run in this section of country that has not had a Leamington in it, and they have always been dangerous at the finish.

TROTTING AT PARKVILLE, L. I.

The opening day at Brooklyn Driving Park, Parkville, L. I., yesterday, was a brilliant success under the management of the well known trainer and driver, Hiram W. Howe. There was a good attendance to witness the trotting, which was for a purse of $50, Belle of Aberdeen, Clara Morris and General being the starters. The weather during the afternoon was fine and the trotting, as a whole, was very respectable, nearly every heat being closely contested; so close, indeed, was the race that it took no less than five heats to decide it in favor of General, he taking the first, third and fifth heats and the race. Clara Morris won the other two heats.

The following is the

TROTTING IN NEW JERSEY.

A few of the old time lovers of trotting assembled at the opening of the West Side Driving Park, New Jersey, yesterday afternoon, to witness the two events announced to come off. These were a purse of $100 for three minute class and a sweepstakes of $75 for running horses. T. Eagan & Co. are now the managers of the park, as they have taken a lease of the grounds for five years. The park has been much improved under the new management, and all is now in readiness for the spring meeting, which takes place on Thursday, the 9th inst., and continues three days.

Three contestants came for the word in the trotting, and these were:—Bay gelding Oua, brown gelding Thomas and brown mare Lady Curry. The race fell to Thomas, who outtrotted the others, but only after a desperate struggle, as Oua was at his wheel every heat and Lady Curry a good third.

In the running race, half mile heats, best three in five, sorrel gelding Atlas, bay gelding Dan O'Connell and gray gelding Pat Rooney started. The first and second heats were captured by Atlas, in which Dan O'Connell pressed him hard. In the third heat only two started, as Dan O'Connell was withdrawn. The heat and race were taken by Atlas by six lengths from Pat Rooney. The following are the

BASEBALL NOTES.

Quite a large number of spectators assembled at Prospect Park yesterday afternoon to witness the return match at baseball between the handball players of Casey's court and those of Cortney's court. As both courts have some very fine baseball players connected with them the game proved to be close and interesting, Cortney's side winning by a score of 8 to 4.

The Yale University nine defeated the Monitors, of Waterbury, Saturday, by a score of 5 to 2.

At Indianapolis on Saturday the Chicagos defeated the Indianapolis Club, by a score of 4 to 1.

To-day the Chicagoes and Cincinnatis play at Cincinnati; Milwaukees and Indianapolis, at Indianapolis; Crickets and Live Oaks, at Lynn; Alleganies and Lowells, at Lowell; Tecumseh and Star, at Syracuse; Springfield and Buffalo, at Springfield; Cleveland and Rochester, at Cleveland; New Haven and Meriden, at New Haven, and Skipper and Star, at Greenpoint.

YACHTING NOTES.

Yacht Agnes, A. Y. C., Mr. Thayer, from New York, passed the Herald station at Whitestone yesterday forenoon, en route to Glenwood, L. I.

A crowd of people were collected in the yard and boat house of Mr. J. B. Smith, at East Providence, R. I., on Saturday morning, May 4, who has for some time past been engaged in building the pleasure yacht Carilla, for Dr. Simon Borden, of Providence. The dimensions of the boat are as follows:—Length, 30 feet 6 inches; breadth, 8 feet; depth, 2 feet 9 inches, and is about 7½ tons burden. It presents a very neat appearance. The motive power will be furnished by a Brayton motor, which is a vertical double-acting hydro-carbon engine. The power is developed by the combustion of petroleum and atmospheric air without either steam or the use of a boiler. Full power can be obtained within one minute after ignition. It is claimed that there is no possibility of explosion from the use of this apparatus. The launch was entirely successful, a party of gentlemen and ladies being on board the yacht as it went off. Mr. Smith has upon his marine railway yacht Medora, belonging to Mr. James Burney, of Pawtucket, to the length of which he is adding about fifteen feet, making the whole length of the craft sixty-one feet. George B. Brayton is the proprietor of the engine referred to.

THE HANLAN-PLAISTED RACE.

The last deposit of $1,000 in the Hanlan-Plaisted sculling race was posted yesterday at the Clipper office. The money is now all up, and will at once be forwarded to the Mayor of Toronto, the final stakeholder. The race will be rowed on the 15th inst., on Toronto Bay, and is for $2,000, the distance being two miles straightaway.

ATHLETICS AT GILMORE'S GARDEN.

The very last athletic meeting of the season at Gilmore's Garden will take place under direction of Billy Edwards next Thursday evening. Every effort will be used to make this a fitting wind up for the season, all the principal boxers of Boston, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and this city participating. Joe Goss, Steve Taylor, Billy Edwards, Mike Donovan, John Cash, Jack Gallagher, Ed. McClinchy, O'Donnell and Flynn, George Siler, and others, have been engaged. The chief feature of the entertainment will be the windup between Mike Donovan and Billy Edwards, both men being in full pugilistic uniform.

BARNEY FERRON'S MURDERER.

JOHN H. WRIGHT CONFESSES HIS CRIME AND IS HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY—HIS STATEMENT TO A HERALD REPORTER.

John H. Wright, the self-confessed murderer of Bernard Ferron, the boatman, was taken to Police Headquarters, in the Brooklyn Municipal Building, yesterday forenoon, in charge of his captors, Captain Reilly, of the Eleventh precinct, and Detectives Looney and Daley. After a brief interview with Superintendent Campbell the prisoner was taken to the photographer's, where an excellent picture of him was obtained for the Rogues' Gallery. Wright was then conveyed in a carriage to the First District Court, corner of Court and Butler streets, where he was followed by a crowd of curious people. The prisoner was somewhat nervous at first, but speedily regained his composure. When he was brought before the bar to plead Judge Ferry read the charge and complaint, which was made by Captain Edward Reilly "upon information and belief," and charged "John H. Wright with having feloniously, wilfully and maliciously, with malice aforethought, murdered Bernard Ferron on March 16, 1878." The prisoner pleaded guilty to the charge, saying, "I killed him, and I am sorry for it." His voluntary examination was then taken, in which he said that he is twenty years of age; was born on Indian River, Maine, and had followed the sea for a livelihood for the past three years. He was then formally committed to the Raymond Street Jail. The prisoner, who is a blue eyed, fair haired "down East" lad, has a simple, gawkish air about him, which is foreign to the wonted ideal or impression of the cold blooded murderer. In the jail he was confined in cell No. 6, with two other prisoners.

A HORRIBLE CONFESSION.

The prisoner, in the course of an interview with a reporter yesterday, gave the details of the story connected with the murder, which were substantially related in the Herald of yesterday. He said that on March 16 Ernest Tabbott and he were on board the schooner Mary B. Harris, in the Erie Basin; that early in the forenoon Tabbott, the mate, left the vessel to go to New York to purchase provisions, leaving him (Wright) in charge. He took two or three drinks of the gin which was kept in the mate's room and was engaged in cleaning lamps in the pantry when Ferron came on board, and approaching him said, "Hello, how are you to-day?" They had a drink of gin together, after which Ferron went into the cabin, where he took a seat. Ferron then wanted to buy some coffee which he saw in a bag, but Wright would not sell it. Some words passed, and the deceased, according to the prisoner's statement, hit at the latter but did not strike him. Wright said, "I then had a wrestle with him, and on breaking loose struck him and knocked him down; he jumped into the mate's room and made another blow for me, but I knocked him down and he fell against the stove. He began to cry out, and I jumped on him and jammed in his head with my heavy boots; I could hear his skull crash, and as he ceased to shout I thought I had finished him. When I saw what I had done I was terribly scared, and went on the quarter deck and looked around. It was then my intention to go ashore and tell what had taken place, but I went back and changed my mind. I found he was dead."

The prisoner stated that he then filled the canvas bag with iron, fastened the body with a rope to it, and dropped it overboard. He said he did not place any rope in the mouth of the deceased and could not tell how the gag came there. Before throwing the body overboard he took $20 from the pocket. He then took Ferron's boat ashore, and returned to the schooner in the yawl which Tabbott had taken with him in the morning. He never breathed a word of the killing to Tabbott when the latter returned to the vessel, and the mate did not suspect anything. Wright said in conclusion:—"I worried over the killing and frequently thought about telling it. I am very sorry for what I have done, but when I first struck the old man I was afraid he might kill me."

Tabbott, the mate, who arrived at Philadelphia yesterday on the Mary B. Harris, to which vessel he has been all along attached, is in no way connected with the crime and bears a good reputation. He will come on to Brooklyn and give such evidence as may be in his power to furnish in the case.

CAPTAIN SMITH'S ASSAILANT.

Patrolman Morris Heffernan, of the First precinct, Brooklyn, who, on Sunday last, attempted to murder Captain Joel Smith, at the Washington street station house, by shooting at him twice, was yesterday arraigned before Police Justice Walsh, in the basement of the City Hall. The court room was crowded by police officers and idle politicians, who were either interested in the disposition of the case or were prompted to put in an appearance through curiosity. The prisoner, who was in an exceedingly nervous condition, evidently the result of recent dissipation, appeared wild and excited. He was attired in citizens' clothes, as his superiors would not longer permit him to wear the uniform of the force. When Judge Walsh had disposed of the usual lengthy roll of Monday morning drunkards and assault and battery cases Heffernan was brought from the "prison pen" and arraigned before the bar. Police Commissioner Colonel Rodney C. Ward, Sergeant Walsh and Patrolmen Riley, Simonson and Quinn were present. The Judge, addressing the prisoner, said, after reading the charge of "assault with intent to kill," "You need not answer the question if you don't wish."

Heffernan said, "Oh, I have nothing to say."

On the voluntary examination he replied:—"I am thirty-seven years of age. I was born in the city of Brooklyn, and live at No. 11 Lawrence street, but," he added, "I suppose my family are turned out now. I have been on the police eight years."

"Are you guilty of the charge, or do you want counsel?" inquired Judge Walsh.

"I don't want counsel," answered the prisoner. "I'll plead guilty of the charge of assault with intent to kill."

The Court then committed the prisoner to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Captain Smith was much easier yesterday, and his physicians are hopeful of his ultimate complete recovery.

A PRIZE PACKAGE FIEND.

Officer Cole, of the Steamboat Squad, led a youth to the bar of the Tombs Police Court yesterday and spread a handful of money and a number of envelopes on the desk before the Judge. Two sunburnt, honest-looking country lads followed on and explained to the Judge that they had come from Oneida county on a canal boat, and that George Peterson, the prisoner, had approached them on pier 7, East River, and offered them sundry prize packages for sale at the reasonable rate of fifty cents each. In one of these prize packages, he assured them, $7 lawful money was enclosed, and they had thereupon put in for a pool $2 each and had purchased eight of the packages, one of which, Peterson told them, was the seven dollar one.

"But there wasn't any money in 'em," said John Campbell, the elder lad, earnestly.

"And you thought you were going to get $7 for $4?" asked the Justice.

"Why, yes, he said so," said the lad, simply.

"Judge, I didn't tell 'em there was $7 in the package. I offered to bet $30 to $10 that there was."

"You did, eh. Well, you're a nice boy. You'll get to Sing Sing some day without any doubt. Just keep right on. There's nothing to prevent you," said the Judge, and he picked out $4 from the pile of money, giving it to the two lads and directing an affidavit of the facts to be made.

Besides the money he gave them some good advice, and after Peterson had paid a fine of $3 the trio went their several ways.

A DEADLY DEBAUCH.

Three Insane Women Mix Chloroform with Their Ale.

"PRIVILEGED PATIENTS" ON THE ISLAND.

Two of Them Dead and the Third Slowly Recovering.

The bodies of Mary Jane Bracken and Julia Hogan lay in the dead house attached to the Lunatic Asylum on Blackwell's Island yesterday. They had died from drinking chloroform procured from the drug store of that institution. In room 22, hall No. 3, Anne Hannahan, who had obtained the poison, believing it to be a bottle of "something good," as she expressed it, and who had invited the others to join her in the fatal wassail, was seriously ill, but progressing toward recovery. All three women were inmates of the asylum—patients whose insanity was of a very mild type and who were so far convalescent as to be employed for the discharge of various light duties. They had previously been Workhouse patients, were not unacquainted with prison discipline, and in former days, when their opportunities were more ample and their resources larger, had been of intemperate habits.

PRIVILEGED PATIENTS.

Anne Hannahan, the survivor, is some sixty years of age; Mary Jane Bracken was between fifty-five and sixty, and Julia Hogan was no more than thirty-four years of age. The portion of the Lunatic Asylum of which they were inmates is occupied by the milder class of female patients, and among these the three women named were so little affected by dementia as to be employed in various household duties. Anne Hannahan and Mary Jane Bracken were engaged as general helpers, and Julia Hogan waited at the table of the steward, Mr. Joralemon. It is the custom in the asylum to furnish some of the convalescing patients with stimulants suited to their needs, and Anne Hannahan was one of those who came within its operation. She received every day a ration of ale, put up in a pint bottle. The rations were put up in the drug store or office and were ranged along outside a high counter. They were usually carried round to the rooms of the patients entitled to them; but it is certain that Anne Hannahan and another woman named Anne Kavanagh were permitted to come to the store and carry them away with them. The drug store stands to the right of the hall, just inside the entrance to the building. It is an ordinary room, almost square, and contains a number of shelves on the side opposite the entrance. On these shelves stand bottles of medicines duly labelled and arranged, and, in fact, the usual furnishing of an apothecary's laboratory. The druggist in charge is Mr. Hugh H. Hagan, and between him and the people whose business or whose privilege brings them into the room is a high counter.

HOW THE CHLOROFORM WAS STOLEN.

Anne Hannahan must have been among the privileged. There was certainly no written or spoken law on the subject, but custom had given her rights, and she had never been confronted by prohibition. On the morning of last Saturday the rations of all stood ranged along the counter on the outside, and Anne Hannahan came to take away her share. Mr. Hagan was making up a prescription and had his back turned, and his assistant, Mr. Cassidy, was getting ready for the distribution of the rations and had his attention directed from the woman who entered the room. Although the immediate object of her attention was the pint bottle of ale at the bottom of the counter, her eye was attracted and possibly her imagination fixed by one of a number of bottles which stood on its top. It was a blue sixteen ounce bottle which had never been broached, and the stopper of which was now tied down and secured with parchment. Her diseased fancy associated it with a former favorite stimulant, and probably the old passion came back to her. At all events she called it gin and slipped it under her apron.

HER INVITED GUESTS.

She carried her ale out with her also, and going up stairs to hall No. 3 met Mary Jane Bracken, her roommate, whom she invited to partake of "something good." Mary Jane was delighted to accept the invitation, and journeying up stairs still further they entered a bathroom, where they found Julia Hogan washing. She too was charmed by the cordial invitation, and the wassail in which Death poured out the libations was begun. They mixed the deadly drug with the ale to give the latter potency, and the ale fulfilled the condition of increasing the volume of their beverage. They drank deeply, and their ghastly carouse being over, they went their different ways. The drug did not take effect immediately, and Mr. Hagan, the druggist, says that Anne Hannahan brought back the empty cholorolorm bottle nearly two hours later, saying that he had given her poison and that she had thrown it into the sink. He then smelled her breath, but did not, he says, detect the odor of chloroform.

THE FATAL EFFECTS.

Saturday afternoon is generally a dull time in the institution, and it is the custom of Dr. William W. Strew, the medical superintendent, to take advantage of the lull in business, go over by one of the boats to the city and do his marketing in Fulton Market. He followed his usual practice on this occasion. Mr. Joralemon, the steward, and his wife were also away, but Mrs. MacDonald, his mother-in-law, remained at home to look after household affairs. Julia Hogan, who waited on her at dinner, was observed to be unusually dull and drowsy, and about one o'clock she slipped away and went to her room. Meanwhile the nurses in hall No. 3 noticed that Anne Hannahan and Mary Jane Bracken were acting very strangely, the general appearance being such as would be produced by intoxication. Dr. Strew's assistants were called to see them, and Dr. Newman, who came first, detected the odor of chloroform. He and Drs. Bowen and Hinckley then began an investigation. They went to the drug store and learned from the druggist that the bottle of chloroform had been stolen. It was now plain that the three women had drunk of its contents. The patients grew rapidly worse, and when Dr. Strew returned from his marketing he found his three assistants in their shirt sleeves laboring with all their might to maintain artificial respiration and keep up the heart's action in the unfortunate women. Julia Hogan was perfectly stupid and seemed as if she would not live fifteen minutes. Every means was tried to restore them or at least to prolong their lives. Artificial respiration, friction, electricity, were all brought into requisition, but two of the women—Julia Hogan and Mary Jane Bracken—were beyond the reach of antidotes. The efforts to save them were kept up all through the night, and at eight o'clock on Sunday morning, while Dr. Strew was sitting beside Julia Hogan, the heart's action ceased altogether.

Mary Jane Bracken still lingered. She had formerly been an epileptic patient and in her case the Doctor resorted to heroic remedies. She was treated freely with stimulants, the best French brandy being administered; but at about one o'clock yesterday morning she, too, succumbed.

Anne Hannahan, the cause of this dual disaster, still lives, and, although she has had some severe attacks of nervous rigor, Dr. Strew believes that she will survive. As she lay in her bed yesterday she spoke quite rationally and told how they drank the fatal draught in the bathroom. She appeared to have implicit faith in the power of the Doctor to save her life. The most prominent effects of the poisoning were violent purging and vomiting in all three cases.

WHERE DOES THE BLAME LIE?

This is the simple story of the case, but the Commissioners of Charities and Correction will be called upon to say whether permitting a patient at all touched with insanity to enter the drug store and roam at large through the building is consistent with proper care, and whether a bottle of a dangerous drug standing on the top of the counter from which it can be readily purloined can be said to be sufficiently secured.

Deputy Coroner Cushman made a post-mortem examination of both bodies and found death to have been caused by chloroform poisoning. No official examination into the circumstances will be made until Thursday morning next, when an inquest will be held.

PICRIC ACID POISONING.

An inquest was held yesterday into the cause of the death of Mary Ann Dougherty, twelve years of age, who died on March 25 under circumstances which led to the belief that she had been poisoned by the absorption of picric acid used in the coloring of artificial leaves and grasses in the factory where she had been employed. The coroner's jury determined that the cause of death was disease of the liver, kidneys and lungs, which may have been accelerated by the absorption of picric acid poisoning used in the coloring of artificial flowers, leaves and grasses, and recommended that the Board of Health make examination of all factories where poisonous ingredients are used, and report the physiological and pathological effects of such ingredients.

THE MARBLE CEMETERY.

The annual meeting of the vault owners in the New York City Marble Cemetery, in Second street, for the purpose of electing five trustees for the ensuing year, was held yesterday at No. 206 Front street. The following gentlemen were chosen:—Charles J. Howell, Thomas Fleming, Henry Day, Howard Wiley and Anson Baker.

During the past year there were forty-two interments and eight removals. The cemetery is strictly private, under the control of no particular sect or denomination, and upon its monuments and tablets are inscribed the names of many of the most honored and respected families of this city. It is the only corporation which affords facilities to the public for temporary interment. President Monroe rested in its vaults for twenty-seven years, and they now hold the body of General Paez, ex-President of Peru.

THE TRUSTEES of the Third Avenue Savings Bank are still seeking in the courts to evade the payment of their just obligations to the poor depositors. They ought to settle and have done with it.

EX-GOVERNOR PACKARD has at last been provided for. He has been nominated for the Liverpool consulship, and there can be little doubt of his confirmation. The salary is six thousand dollars.

THE AFRICAN EMIGRATION feeling is extending northward. At a meeting of the city branch of the Colonization Society to-day the subject will be discussed by Secretary of the Navy Thompson and others.

THE REPORT of the Seamen's Friend Society shows that it accomplished a good deal of excellent work during the past year in many civilized as well as uncivilized parts of the world. A little more attention to the sailors' heathen boarding house keepers and the harpies who prey upon unfortunate mariners in this port would be no harm.

IN CONGRESS YESTERDAY there was an indirect vote on the tariff. A resolution was offered by Mr. Thompson, of Pennsylvania, that a revision of the law was inexpedient at the present time. He moved its reference to the Committee on Appropriations. Mr. Wood asked that it be sent to the Ways and Means, but a motion to refer it to the Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union prevailed by an overwhelming vote.

THE WEATHER.—The depression that dominated the weather in the Eastern districts during the past week has moved through the St. Lawrence Valley toward Nova Scotia. Another area of low pressure is advancing from the West. It now overlies the Northern Missouri and Platte valleys, where the barometer is very low. But little precipitation attends this depression. Steep gradients of pressure and temperature that are forming on the western margin of the low area point to the probable development of very severe wind storms in the Missouri Valley. The pressure remains high on the South Atlantic coast and Eastern Gulf, but it is falling again in Texas. Temperatures have fallen in the New England States. In the West and South there has been a general rise. Rain has fallen in the Middle and New England States and in the western lake region, but the quantity has been very slight. The winds have been from brisk to high in the Western districts; elsewhere they have been from light to fresh. The weather in New York and its vicinity to-day will be warm and fair. To-morrow it will be warm and fair or partly cloudy, followed by increasing cloudiness and possibly light rains.

What Americans May Sell to Russians.

The presence of the Cimbria on the coast of Maine brings our relations to the impending war between Russia and England vividly before the American public. Russia needs many things which the United States can supply, and it is important that American merchants and shipowners be able to discriminate between unlawful and permitted transactions. Our neutrality laws are very strict and our people have no desire to violate them. When the boundary line is clearly drawn they will respect it, and what they want to know is between what classes of transactions the legal boundary runs. Can Americans sell ships to Russia, and if so, with what limitations? Can Americans sell arms to Russia, and if so, under what liabilities? These are the only questions which as yet seem important, because ships and arms are the only things which it seems likely that Russia will wish to purchase of us.

As to arms the case is perfectly clear and free from all difficulty. War or no war, the trade in arms is as free as any branch of commerce, so far as relates to interference with it by our government. Until war shall have been declared the trade in arms and munitions is under no restriction any more than trade in wheat or cotton. After a declaration of war the trade in arms is equally free from government restraint, but is attended with considerable risk. Arms are contraband of war, and are subject to seizure by the belligerent against whom they are meant to be used, but trade in them is perfectly free, subject to this risk on the part of the owners. It is for them, not for the government, to decide whether they will take the risk of capture. But this risk will be incurred by Americans only when the contraband goods are sent abroad without change of ownership to find a market with one or the other belligerent. But this is not the ordinary course of this description of business. It is hardly supposable that American manufacturers of arms or American dealers in arms will be so imprudent and venturesome as to send their property abroad in search of a market subject to the risk of belligerent capture. They will sell to Russian agents for cash, and having got their money they have no further concern about the goods which are no longer theirs. The Russian agents will ship them at the risk of their own government. If they are captured and forfeited as contraband of war the loss falls on Russia, the new owner, and her losses will merely serve to extend the American market, since Russia will buy more arms to replace those captured by the enemy. The most recent and approved writers on international law merely indorse the exposition of this branch of it put forth by Jefferson, in 1793, in an early stage of the mighty wars between England and France growing out of the French Revolution. The British government, with its customary arrogance, had protested against the sale of arms to France by Americans. Jefferson, in a communication to the British Minister, stated in reply what is now the accepted law of nations on this subject. He was as terse, lucid and convincing as was his habit in diplomatic arguments. "Our citizens," wrote Jefferson, "have been always free to make, vend and export arms. To suppress their callings, the only means perhaps of their subsistence, because a war exists in foreign and distant countries, in which we have no concern, would scarcely be expected. It would be hard in principle and impossible in practice. The law of nations, therefore, respecting the rights of those at peace, does not require from them such an internal derangement of their occupations. It is satisfied with the external penalty pronounced by the President's proclamation, that of confiscation of such portion of these arms as shall fall into the hands of any of the belligerent Powers on their way to the ports of their enemies." The view of Jefferson is at present the universally recognized doctrine on this point. Subject to the risk of belligerent capture, the sale of arms to Russia is as free to citizens of the United States as any other branch of trade. If the arms are sold to Russian agents the risk of capture falls on the purchasers, and even they are safe up to the time of an actual declaration of war. Arms can be captured on the ocean only in the exercise of belligerent rights, which follow, and cannot precede, the actual outbreak of hostilities. Russia has, therefore, the free use of our markets for the purchase of arms and munitions. England cannot complain of this, since she sold arms to both parties to our civil war in the exercise of a right which our government never called in question.

When we come to the sale of ships the subject assumes a different aspect. The damages which England consented to pay for permitting Confederate cruisers to escape from her ports, while we made no complaint of the sale of arms to the Confederates, attests the different footing on which these two branches of trade are admitted to stand. Our neutrality laws are remarkably strict in forbidding the fitting out and equipment of ships intended for hostile use against any Power with which the United States are at peace. Why should ships be subject to such stringent rules while the trade in arms is free? We will not undertake to explain the grounds of the distinction. It is undeniable that it exists, and that our laws prohibit, by heavy penalties, the fitting out in our ports of ships intended for hostile use. The rightfulness of this branch of trade hinges entirely on the question of intention. We are as free to sell merchant ships in time of war as in time of peace. We are as free to sell merchant ships to a belligerent as to a neutral. But we are not free to fit out ships as cruisers either in time of peace or in time of war. The question of hostile intent is sometimes so difficult to decide that our laws, by way of precaution, require the government, in cases where there are reasonable grounds of suspicion, to put owners under bonds to double the value of the vessel and cargo before giving a clearance. And yet merchant vessels, intended only for mercantile voyages, may be as freely sold and taken away as any kind of merchandise. It is no violation either of the law of nations or of our neutrality laws for Americans to sell transport ships to Russia. The Cimbria itself is a conspicuous illustration that the purchase or charter of a transport ship is permissible. The Cimbria is a German vessel chartered by Russia as a transport. Had the charter been granted by American instead of German owners our neutrality laws would not have been infringed by the transaction if the vessel was not intended as a cruiser. But had the purpose been to arm her for depredations on British commerce it would have been the clear duty of our government to detain her. Had she been merely suspected on proofs that were not conclusive it would have been the duty of the government to put her under bonds at twice her value, and the bonds would be forfeited if she afterward engaged in hostilities. If by an evasion or subterfuge a ship intended for hostile purposes should escape to sea all who had any complicity in the transaction would be triable for a high misdemeanor and subject to heavy fines and long imprisonment. A trade in ships with Russia as the purchaser is, therefore, very unsafe, unless it can be made evident that there is no intention to use them for hostile purposes. But, with this exception, the trade in ships is as free as the trade in arms or the trade in cotton, even if Russia be the purchaser.

Crippling the Army.

Mr. Abram S. Hewitt's Army Appropriation bill is now ready for submission to the Committee of Ways and Means. It has evidently been carefully framed and is based on a principle which may well appear just and expedient to a civilian. Mr. Hewitt finds that there are in the army organization as many regiments as would, if filled up, raise the standard to forty thousand men. This he considers too high, his theory being that the standing army now, in a time of peace, ought to be modelled on that of 1860, making allowance only for the increase of population. To maintain a sufficient number of regiments for a force of forty thousand men, when the standard is to be only twenty or twenty-five thousand, seems to Mr. Hewitt a needless waste of money on epaulettes and side arms, so he proposes to sweep away fourteen regiments out of the forty now existing, to fill up the remaining twenty-six by consolidation and recruiting, and to muster out of the service all superfluous officers. He sugar-coats the pill thus administered to the retired officers by proposing to bestow on them a gift of from one to four years' pay and allowances, according to their length of service, and seeks further to reconcile them to what would be a decided breach of faith on the part of the government by making a reduction of twenty per cent on the pay of their comrades who remain in the service.

Mr. Hewitt's bill has neither fairness nor expediency to recommend it to favor. It is not just to those who have fitted themselves for the military service of the country to turn them adrift by wholesale, and it is not wise to drive from the army officers whose education has been a considerable cost to the nation. If we are to have an army of only twenty-five thousand men—a mere military bagatelle—it will be better to maintain forty or fifty skeleton regiments than half that number of full regiments. We shall then have a valuable nucleus for a large force in case of an emergency, since raw recruits, merged in a regiment half filled with trained men and well officered, will speedily become efficient soldiers. The present number of regiments ought not to be reduced, and certainly the pay of army officers is by no means too liberal. Besides, Mr. Hewitt's bill does not hold out a very promising prospect of real economy. The payments to be made to retired officers would sweep away more than the savings for the next two or three years, and by that time a more liberal policy in regard to the military service of the country will probably prevail.

Communists and Strikers.

It is scarcely possible to withhold sympathy altogether from the miners on strike in Illinois when we hear only their side of the story of their grievances. Labor such as is done in coal mines could not be made acceptable to the mass of men by any rate of wages; and those whose hard fortune it is to be unable to live otherwise than by such labor should at least be fairly paid the prices they contract for. But in the issue made by these strikers it is alleged on their part that while the rate of pay—a cent and a cent and a half a bushel—is ruinously low, they have to pay for all their own supplies, as oil, tools and powder, and are cheated in the measurement of the coal. If a strike were likely to afford them a remedy they certainly would be justified in striking, but it does not promise well, and their condition at the end of their endeavor will only be the worse for their loss of time. There is, no doubt, another side to the story, but it will scarcely be inquired into, for the public will not wait to hear it, but will condemn, without even such reasons as it might give, the attitude of workmen who affiliate with the communistic schemers who seem to have somewhat alarmed the Western communities by their warlike preparations.

Good Detectives.

The skill and success with which the secret of the Erie basin murder was unravelled and the murderer hunted down is a feather in the cap of the Brooklyn police. At the outset this appeared to be an utterly trackless case—a case with which it did not seem possible to connect any individual or set of individuals. But the keen pursuit of a clew derived from the material with which the dead body had been sent to the bottom soon made it possible to sketch the nature of the event in imagination; and the fact was ascertained that the very iron fastened to the body had been the cause of a quarrel between the captain of a schooner and a sailor in his employ. It was a case, therefore, in which murder spoke by the "most miraculous organ" of an old mass of junk. In every stage of this case the Brooklyn detectives appear to have worked in a spirit very uncommon for detectives hereabouts—a spirit of intelligent devotion to their duties.

Peace or War.

Things said by exalted personages to be given out to the world are apt to be more distinguished for some other peculiarity than that of strict accuracy; consequently the fact that the Empress of Russia said on Sunday that "peace was assured" does not put aside altogether the probability of war. Even Baron Jomini's repetition of the statement may leave it doubtful. Baron Jomini should know undoubtedly the precise course and tenor of the negotiations of his government with England, for, since the recent illness of Prince Gortschakoff, the conduct of these negotiations has been in his hands. It is not consistent with the spirit of Russian diplomacy for officials to declare the result of great negotiations while these are actually on foot, and that the negotiation with England has yet reached no point that can be called final is evident from the reticence in London. It is, however, not easy to see what purpose there could be in giving out to the Russian capital information likely to encourage hopes, unless there was a good basis of fact beneath it. We may regard these statements, therefore, as very encouraging, made, as they must have been, in the full knowledge that some concessions or admissions had been reached on one side or the other, in view of which a hostile attitude could not be maintained. If an understanding with England has been reached the case for Russia will become very simple at the Turkish capital, and the Russian army will leave the pachas of that now agitated city to fight out between themselves that battle for supremacy which has always been a characteristic of Moslem States. Osman Pacha, through the prestige that his name has with the army, will become in that case practically the dictator of the Padishah's policy, and will maintain the existing Sultan against all plots to dethrone him.

The Trip of the Tally Ho.

The journey of the members of the Coaching Club to and from the good city of Philadelphia was in every sense a very great success. On the return trip yesterday the thousands of persons who turned out at every point last Saturday to cheer the merry travellers on their way reappeared to give them another welcome and goodby. Going and coming it was one magnificent ovation. It is probably more than forty years since the old stage coach rumbled along these Jersey and Pennsylvania roads, and it is very certain that, except in the way of amusement, the conveyance of the olden time will never be restored there or anywhere else. That the old discarded system of travel is capable of being converted into a healthful, rational amusement is the chief value of the trip that has been so successfully accomplished by the gentlemen of the Coaching Club. Riding and driving are among the manliest of amusements, and as such ought to be encouraged in every way possible. The amusements of a nation wield a most important influence on the formation of the character of its people. No country whose sports were of a low order has ever made an important figure in history, and it is safe to say that none ever will. The amusements of a people are, in fact, a gauge of its civilization. Where they are, as in old Rome, fierce, barbarous, vicious, the people are cruel, bloodthirsty, revengeful. The Spanish bull fight colors the whole national life of Spain. One of England's greatest statesmen saw in the English shooting moors and hunting fields the training schools that enabled her officers to win victories under Marlborough and Wellington. During the past ten or fifteen years our outdoor amusements have been very much elevated in tone and character. Coaching, the latest addition to their number, is one of the most fascinating and picturesque of them all.

Mercury on the Go.

Yesterday every telescopic weapon, of short or long range, from the columbiad refractor to the pocket star-shooter, was turned on the shining face of the God of Day in the search for a peculiar dark spot that has been expected to appear there as a result of too much Mercury. The sun, who is by far the brightest light of our corner of the universe, is subject to these little periodical indispositions, which may be attributed, perhaps, to his sedentary employment and its result—a torpid liver. Sometimes it is Venus that rushes past him, laughing in his face and then vanishing in the splendor of his smiles; more frequently he gets completely moonstruck and even frowns a brief but chilling glance at us, while Luna solemnly eclipses his radiance. Some learned astronomers assert that the sun often is quite troubled by the antics of that light-heeled planetary scamp Mercury, who has ventured nearer to the awful presence than even the beautiful Venus or the queenly Juno. For seven long hours yesterday Mercury, they say, has been tickling the face of the sun with a feather presumably stolen from the wing of Jove's own bird. Our American eagle, which is a lineal descendant of that immortal fowl, has consequently taken a great interest in the performance, and has gazed long and steadily at the flaming face of the insulted luminary hoping that something unusual would happen. But being thoroughly accustomed to such tricks the sun has only laughed at this, the latest pleasantry. We have comparatively few chances of a good look at our mercurial friend. It is only when he is farthest away from us that we can see his shining face. But when he dodges across the sun, as he did yesterday, we get a nearer view, although it is one giving the darkest side of him. Still it is enough for many useful purposes, and astronomers recognize its value by adopting every precaution which their knowledge suggests to get the proper description of a well known but fugitive wanderer through space, and who is "wanted" at astronomical headquarters. Our very full despatches, published elsewhere, tell the fortunes of the observers in various parts of the country yesterday.

Suppressing Public Nuisances.

Recorder Hackett has opportunely directed the attention of the Grand Jury of the Court of General Sessions to the existence of nuisances arising from bone boiling, fat rendering and other offensive smells in various parts of the city, and to the illegal encroachments upon and obstructions to the streets, roads and public places in the form of booths, stands and other encumbrances. The law requires the Board of Health to put a stop to the former evil, and the law makes it the duty of the Common Council to prevent the latter. The Board of Health, however, shuts its eyes and closes its nose to the vile odors that make some localities unendurable and imperil the public health, while the Board of Aldermen, in the teeth of the law, license or authorize the misuse of the public thoroughfares, which it is their duty to prevent. The Recorder instructs the Grand Jury to inquire thoroughly into these matters and to indict any public officers who may be found to neglect the duties imposed upon them by law. The action of the Aldermen in illegally permitting the use of the streets for booths and stands by those who can bring sufficient influence to bear to command their favor has already been brought to the Mayor's notice; but it is to be hoped that the Grand Jury will take the matter in hand and adopt measures that will effectually put a stop to the abuse.

Labor Reform.

For a pleasant little social tea party commend us to the thirty or forty amiable labor reformers who held what they call "the Annual Convention of the Labor Reform League" in this city on Sunday last. The prospect of the success of the legislation which these remarkable statesmen urge on Congress is not encouraging, it is true; but it is agreeable to contemplate what a general good time we should have if our representatives at Washington were sufficiently enlightened to keep pace with these leaguers. With "freedom of conscience in love and the right of private judgment in morality" we should be relieved of all Brooklyn scandals and should universally recognize the justice of the higher law as laid down by the late Secretary Seward and practised by the present head of the State Insurance Bureau. Classifying those who hold property for increase as invaders and robbers, prohibiting by law the collection of rents and interest and pronouncing a demand for a debt a penal offence, we should be enabled to make every gentleman of leisure who now devotes his time to street corners and groggery "dives" an honored and respected member of society, at least for a time. Yet in the face of the benefits thus promised by the labor reformers, provided they ever become a majority in the land and hold the reins of government, it is singular to find that they are subject to the ridicule and denunciation of the unthinking. This might be doubted but for the fact that the Secretary of the League announced that one of the circulars calling the annual convention and stating the objects of the League had been returned to him, bearing the following profane and unappreciative indorsement:—"This is damned nonsense. Go and work. Go to church instead of talking riots." Of course the labor reformers will do no such thing.

The immediate cause of the rash act is attributed to mental aberration, brought on by domestic difficulties. AMUSEMENTS.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE—"HUSBAND AND WIFE."

An interesting event in the present dramatic season was the début in English, last evening, of Signora Majeroni at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, and the reappearance of Signor Majeroni in a new role. The play on this occasion was a drama written by Signor A. Montaignani for the above mentioned actors, known in the original as "Jealousy," and called in the translation by F. Morrell "Husband and Wife." It is a thoroughly Italian drama, dealing with the uncompromising jealousy of a newly wedded husband. There is little action in the play, but the interest is very strong and increases with each act. There is a subtlety about the piece that is almost too fine for an average audience, one that is used to the dramatic situations of "Camille" or the "Two Orphans," but we think the story will prove attractive enough without startling climaxes or red fire. It is very simple, but, as the reader will see, capable of strong scenes. The Marquis St. Elia, a nobleman brought up by his mother to love books more than women, sees Diana on the street and at once falls in love with her. A marriage is arranged by his mother and Diana's uncle, the Duke de Riario. Diana is not at all in love with him, but she marries as she is bid. Under the circumstances she sees no harm in enjoying a little flirtation with the Count de Riverda. This rouses all the jealousy that the intense nature of St. Elia is capable of, and after finding a love letter from de Riverda to his wife he kills the Count in a duel. A stormy scene with the wife follows and he openly denounces her, but continues to live with her, so that the world may not know what has passed between them. The wife is almost mad with grief, for she was only a coquette after all. While St. Elia's course seems almost brutal, it was but natural in one who loved as he did and looked with unworldly eyes upon the flirtations of a married woman, and he has our sympathies up to the last act, in the first part of which he does seem to be a little too unrelenting. In the meantime Diana becomes madly in love with her husband, but is repulsed on every advance. She becomes ill, and in the end he is touched by her enduring love and pale face, for his own love had never ceased to burn for her, and the curtain falls upon a grand reconciliation. Signor Majeroni acted the part to the life. Nothing could have been more natural than his manner, and, we must say it, he looked quite capable of the jealousy he depicted and the revenge he wrought. His passion was never torn to tatters, but seemed rather to be held down by sheer strength of will. At times it would rush to the top, but he shut his teeth against it and forced it back. As an impersonation of intense love and terrible jealousy Signor Majeroni's performance left little to be desired. His appearance without any stage disguise showed a young and handsome man of graceful and courtly bearing. Signora Majeroni as Diana made a decidedly favorable impression. Her accent is at times scarcely perceptible, and she has a voice that is very sympathetic in quality. Her face is exceedingly interesting and her stage appearance attractive. She acts with a great deal of force, but never rants. In her impassioned moments she aroused her auditors to genuine applause, and both she and Signor Majeroni were called before the curtain at the end of every act and three times at the end of the third act. In the last act we thought Signora Majeroni at her best. Her scene with her husband was very pathetic. Mr. A. H. Hastings made quite a hit as General de Lucca and acted with more vigor than we thought him capable of. There was considerable difference among the actors as to the pronunciation of many names. Some said Deahna, others Diana, others again Deana, while some spoke of Mi-lan and others of Mi-lan. Would it not be well to settle upon some rule of pronunciation before going upon the stage?

GRAND OPERA HOUSE—KING LEAR.

Mr. John McCullough is extending his repertory as rapidly as possible—too rapidly, indeed, if artistic success is in any way superior to popularity and reputation founded upon tours de force. Last night he acted King Lear before a good sized audience, who demonstrated their pleasure by frequent applause. To the character of Lear Mr. McCullough brought keen intelligence, careful study, and those qualities which have contributed so pre-eminently to his success in rôles like Spartacus and Virginius. But, while in many respects he rose to grandeur and showed real tragic power, as a whole he fell far short, both in conception and execution, of Shakespeare's most complex and subtle creation. No living English or American actor can play Lear with any degree of success. In no part is Mr. Booth seen to such disadvantage. Forrest was the last who wore the royal robes of the tender-hearted and foolish old king with real majesty and who gave to the poet's powerful and frequently overstrained lines that fiery and impassioned eloquence, mingled with infinite grace and tenderness, which alone can make them fully understood. Mr. McCullough was thoroughly in earnest; his whole heart was in his speech and action; his movements especially showed deep study, and his reading was at times broad, searching and eloquent; but there was little majesty in this King Lear, little tenderness and no subtlety. He seemed rather an aged Spartacus than the unfortunate king and father whose woes have made the world weep. He ranted until his voice became absolutely painful. His natural vigor overbore the feebleness of age, and if he had torn his white beard and snowy hair aside he would have seemed exactly what he was—the gladiator defying his enemies. In his line Mr. McCullough is to-day pre-eminent; but it will be a long while, if indeed ever, before he can play Lear acceptably. Mr. McCullough's support does not call for special mention. Mr. Wheelock was a rather dainty Edgar. Miss Boniface was simple and pleasing as Cordelia. Mr. Willie Young was a pretty and graceful Fool. To-morrow evening "Damon and Pythias" will be produced, and on Wednesday Mr. McCullough will have another opportunity as Jack Cade.

PARK THEATRE—"LA VIE PARISIENNE."

The sparkling naughtiness of "La Vie Parisienne," deftly sugar coated with lively French and made still more palatable by Offenbach's tinkling measures and merry chansons, was given to the audience at the Park Theatre last evening. If it was a little highly seasoned one could not deny that it was pretty, and its touches of profligacy being held in that kind of amber suspension which the French tongue is reputed to facilitate did not offend as they probably would have offended had they been tricked out in grosser English. Mlle. Aimée brought all the vivacious and piquant graces to the rôle of Gabrielle and languished with most admirable seeming when that kind of simulation was necessary. Her dashing methods won the favor of the house after the old fashion, and some of her merry ditties drew forth plaudits that ripened into encores and then pealed out in further redemands. This was especially so in respect to her singing of that amusing measure, "Je suis veuve d'un colonel," the sprightly refrain of which expanded the applause into almost clamorous enthusiasm. Then came the Tyrolienne, at the end of the second act, whose Teutonic gutterals failed to curtail or disguise the archness and vivacity of the singer. It had to be twice repeated. The distribution of the parts was entirely satisfactory. Mlle. Duparc as Pauline emulated the abandon of Mlle. Aimée, and her singing, notably in the duet, "L'Amour, c'est une échelle immense," was received with more than bountiful favor. The rôle of the Baron was filled by M. Duplan, whose methods as an actor are excellent and Messrs. Mezières and Legros were Bobinet and Gardefeu respectively. Their work was most satisfactorily done and came in for a large measure of appreciation. Mons. Mollard had the triple duties belonging to the Brazilian, Frick and Prosper and two of these parts have further subdivisions. His singing of "Pour découper adroitement" was one of the features of the opéra bouffe and the couplet was redemanded with emphasis that might not be denied. The deliciously wild finale to the third act had also to be repeated, and, although "La Vie Parisienne" was certainly not sine macula, it at all events greatly pleased the audience. This evening "Giroflé-Girofla" will be presented.

BROADWAY THEATRE—"MAGNOLIA."

At the Broadway Theatre last evening was presented for the first time in this city the play of "Magnolia," which had met with some success in Philadelphia two years ago and in Boston but a few weeks since. The plot is very similar to that of the "Octoroon," but is somewhat more involved. The characters are also much like those in the melodrama, but reveal eccentricity and humor in broadened outline and features. Some of the fun is really good, native and natural. It is sometimes too strained for effect, but it is never silly. The pathos seems lacking in elaboration, but this may have so appeared through deficiencies in the acting. The situations are dramatic and seem to be reached by a natural evolution of incident which produces in the mind of the spectator a fresher impression than if they were the result of hardly wrought art. Miss Minnie Doyle assumed the character of Magnolia, but with poor success. Her elocution is very faulty and although there is naïveté in her manner it is not plastic enough to reflect a leading rôle. Her support was excellent, which perhaps made her defects more conspicuous by contrast. Mr. Louis Aldrich as Sam Craig and Mr. Lemoyne as Bijah Bantam carried the performance through in such a manner that the audience did not fail of realizing at least a part of their expectations.

MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC NOTES.

GREAT FIRE IN MANCHESTER

[BY CABLE TO THE HERALD.]

LONDON, May 7, 1878.

The HERALD's St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs that the Empress of Russia announced in the salon of the Czarewitch on Sunday that an understanding with England was now certain to be reached, and that peace was assured.

THE ACTING CHANCELLOR.

Baron Jomini made the same announcement on the evening of the same day to guests in his own house. It adds great weight to the statement to know that the Baron is now in reality the Chancellor of the Russian Empire, having entirely replaced Prince Gortschakoff since his illness.

WILL SOON BE KNOWN.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times has reason to believe that questions of the very highest importance will be practically decided in the course of the next week. Meanwhile the public desire for a peaceable solution is increasing.

COUNT SCHOUVALOFF'S VISIT HOME.

A St. Petersburg despatch to the Vienna Political Correspondence says Count Schouvaloff visits St. Petersburg this week in consequence of his own request to be permitted to report personally respecting the pending negotiations. Much importance is attached to this visit. It is understood that the Count will stay at the Russian capital about two weeks.

ITS IMPORTANCE TO SCHOUVALOFF.

The Vienna correspondent of the Times says:—"Although it is thought that Count Schouvaloff's visit to St. Petersburg is merely for a short time, it is believed to be in connection with important negotiations. Should he succeed in bringing about a solution he will probably be looked upon as having qualified himself as the successor of Prince Gortschakoff. It is believed that the Czar will avoid appointing Prince Gortschakoff's successor as long as possible."

ANOTHER SUCCESSOR NAMED.

The Times' Paris correspondent has received information that well informed persons in St. Petersburg are convinced that Count Adlerberg will succeed Prince Gortschakoff. Such an appointment would mean the postponement of reforms and the subordination of everything to the Czar, of whom Count Adlerberg is a mere instrument.

THE HERALD PROBABLY RIGHT.

The North German Gazette, of Berlin, yesterday denied a somewhat similar report that Count Adlerberg had been selected to temporarily replace Prince Gortschakoff.

TURKEY APPEALS TO THE POWERS.

The Daily News' Constantinople correspondent also says:—"I have just heard that the Porte has sent a note to the Powers, maintaining that it cannot evacuate Shumla, Varna and Batoum until the Russians retire and, according to the Treaty of San Stefano, surrender Adrianople. The Russians, of course, maintain the counter proposition that they cannot withdraw until the Turks evacuate the fortresses."

BATOUM'S EVACUATION NOT URGED

A despatch from Constantinople says the negotiations in regard to Shumla and Varna continue, but the Russians do not insist at present on the evacuation of Batoum.

ANOTHER CONSTANTINOPLE CABAL.

While the general political situation is unchanged, and the course of the negotiations between St. Petersburg and London continues uneventful, there is no lack of important incident. "At Constantinople," the Daily News' correspondent says, "another palace revolution is threatened. The conspirators for the overthrow of Sultan Abdul-Hamid and the accession of Murad or somebody else actually fixed one day last week for the attempt, but fear of Russian interference caused a change of their plans, and the conspirators say that they must wait until the Russians go.

DANGER OF A COLLISION.

"It is difficult to say what would be the attitude of the Russians in case of a revolution, but there is great danger that the Russian and English troops would come into collision in such an event. English influence is now believed to be uppermost in the counsels of the Sultan, who, between Mr. Layard, the British Ambassador, pulling one way and the Russians the other, has anything but a pleasant time.

NON-PACIFIC PACHAS.

"The majority of all the Pachas and all of the late Ministers are against the Sultan and the people are sullen and discontented. There have been violent speeches against the tax on bread, which is now at famine prices.

OSMAN A HERO NO LONGER.

"The Pachas are all ready to fly at each others' throats. Osman Pacha, for instance, is cursed on all sides by the other Pachas as a fool and by some as a traitor.

NO GOVERNMENT OF ITS OWN.

"Without either English or Russian support the Sultan could not stay on the throne another day." Sultan Abdul-Hamid, it will be remembered, succeeded Murad, his elder brother, who was deposed August 31, 1876.

LOOK OUT FOR CHANGES!

The same correspondent says:—"Sadyk Pacha is certain not to remain chief of the Ministry long, though it is difficult to see what English influence would gain by his overthrow."

ONLY "A BLIND."

If it is true, as all the correspondents at the Turkish capital agree, that the present Cabinet manifests British tendencies even more frankly than their predecessors, such friendly manifestations may be a blind, however.

FRESH DIFFICULTIES.

The Times' Pera correspondent has reason to believe that the Turks will raise a series of fresh difficulties concerning the fortresses, based on the interpretation of the San Stefano treaty.

TODLEBEN HAS A TALK.

A special despatch from Constantinople to the Times, dated May 5, says:—"Sadyk Pacha, President of the Turkish Council of Ministers, and Salvet Pacha, Minister of Foreign Affairs, had a long interview with General Todleben yesterday. General Todleben to-day visited Buyukdere with his staff and examined the coast of the Bosphorus."

THE SUBJECT UNDER DISCUSSION.

The Vienna correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says the main points now under negotiation are the limits of Bulgaria and proposed modification in Asia Minor. England objects to the extension of Bulgaria to the Aegean Sea and France warmly supports her. Russia proposed to make important concessions to Austria, but Count Andrassy replied that he must defer any decision until the meeting of the Congress. The famine in Northeast Russia is increasing.

THE MUSSULMAN INSURRECTION.

Advices from Adrianople and Philipopolis of the 2d inst. report continual fighting about Haskoi, in which district twenty-one Mohammedan villages have been destroyed, the Russians laying the blame on the Bulgarians and the Bulgarians laying it on the Russians.

STILL IN THE HILLS.

There have been many arrests at Adrianople, among them the Bulgarians accused of complicity in the destruction of the Turkish villages. The insurgents have not yet descended into the plain further west than Haskoi, but the Pomaks (Bulgarians who have been converted to Islamism) of the Dritahma Valley co-operate with the main body of the insurgents, furnishing a contingent and holding the mountain passes.

RUSSIAN RETALIATION.

To counteract this movement a Russian force is marching from Sofia. In the south the insurgents have taken Rahova and other places. Thirty-eight wounded Russians have been brought to Philippopolis.

A LARGE FORCE.

The main body of the insurgents is estimated at 30,000, exclusive of scattered bands. Information reaches us that many Greeks have joined and that there is communication between the leaders and the insurgent bands of Thessaly, which seems credible when it is remembered that the Greek insurrection was anti-Slav rather than anti-Turk. There seems also reason to expect that a strong Albanian contingent will join the insurrection.

WOUNDED AND PRISONERS.

The Times' Bucharest despatch reports that 500 insurgent prisoners and sixty wounded Russians have arrived at the Danube from south of the Balkans. Some of the Russians state that the insurgents have had several successes. Twelve hundred Russians left Parapan on Saturday and recrossed the Danube. Supplies are being hurried southward.

OUT OF THE MARITZA VALLEY.

The Times' despatch from Vienna says the insurgents seem to have entirely disappeared from the Maritza Valley, but it is unknown whether they have been driven back or are merely concentrating to resist large Russian reinforcements.

THE SAVAGE ARMENIAN KURD.

A special dispatch to the Times from Syra says:—"News from Kharpoot, Turkish Armenia, reports the plundering of ninety-one Armenian villages in the district of Chemistsezo by Dersin Koords. The Ottoman authorities are unable to afford protection.

WORSE TIMES IN THE FUTURE.

"Although the district is greatly impoverished, double taxes are demanded. In Gieghi, which lies between Kharpoot and Erzeroum, the dearth threatens soon to become a famine."

ENGLAND'S PREPARATIONS.

This week will be an unusually busy one at the English arsenals and dock yards. Shipowners who hitherto have been privileged to berth their vessels in proximity to the Admiralty moorings opposite the victualling yard at Deptford have received notice to remove them, as all the room available is to be reserved for transports.

RECRUITS ARE PLENTY.

The reports of recruiting officers for the past month show a remarkable increase in the number of enlistments for the army, and the increase is still advancing at a steady rate.

REOPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

Parliament reopened yesterday after the Easter recess. In the House of Commons notice was given of various questions regarding the employment of Indian troops by Sir George Campbell (liberal), member for Kirkcaldy district; Sir William Vernon-Harcourt (liberal), member for Oxford city, and others. Sir George Campbell's motion comes on to-night.

NEGOTIATIONS CONTINUE.

Sir Stafford Northcoate, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in reply to a question asked by the Marquis of Hartington (leader of the liberals), said:—"I can only say that negotiations with Russia continue. It would be highly disadvantageous to the public interest to discuss them now."

NOT A PARLIAMENTARY QUESTION.

Sir Stafford Northcote further said that when the despatch of Indian troops was resolved upon some time ago it was not thought necessary to communicate that intention to Parliament.

MR. BRIGHT REBUKED.

The Chancellor also said that, although Mr. John Bright was not in the House, he (the Chancellor) claimed the right to refer to Mr. Bright's charge that the government, and Sir Stafford Northcote in particular, had deceived the House. He hoped Mr. Bright would make that charge in the House.

WANTS TO KNOW.

Sir William Vernon-Harcourt queried the right of the government to employ Indian troops without the consent of Parliament.

A TRANSFER OF TROOPS.

Sir Stafford Northcote defended the act as constitutional, being merely a movement of troops from one part to another part of the Empire. "The government," he said, "did not publish the news and did not expect it to become public so soon. The government's policy still is to obtain an amicable settlement, but it may be disappointed.

WHERE THE MONEY WILL BE FOUND.

"It therefore feels that it is its duty to take precautions. The expense of the Indian troops will be borne by the Imperial Exchequer." He also said he apprehended that they would serve under the Indian Mutiny act.

UNFIT TO MEET EUROPEANS.

A long and desultory discussion over the despatch of Indian troops in the House of Commons followed:—

Sir George Campbell, who was formerly Lieutenant Governor of Bengal, declared that some regiments which were included in the expeditionary force were unfit to cope with Europeans.

WHEN THEY MAY TALK.

Sir Stafford Northcote stated that the House would have a full opportunity of passing judgment on the measure when the estimate for the expenses of the expedition was brought forward. A premature disclosure of the government's intentions would cause increased difficulties in regard to the transportation of the troops. He adhered to the statement, made previous to the recess, that the diplomatic situation afforded no additional ground for anxiety.

AT AN EARLIER DAY.

Mr. Newdegate (conservative) regretted that the estimates were not presented to the House before the troops were moved.

FOLLOWING MR. BRIGHT'S COURSE.

Mr. Rylands (liberal) considered that the government had been guilty of a direct suppression of the truth.

THERE WILL BE A PROTEST.

Mr. Fawcett (liberal) declared that if the leaders of the opposition abstained from action he would submit a resolution protesting against the assumption by the Executive of authority to employ Indian troops without the consent of Parliament. If the government could take such a step upon their own authority Parliamentary control was meaningless.

THE BOUDARIES DIFFICULTY.

The Agence Russe, of St. Petersburg, has an article referring to the statement in the St. Petersburg despatch in the London Times of April 29, that the concessions Russia would make are the limitation of the boundaries and period of occupation by Bulgaria, the substitution of a European for a Russian commission and the organization of a European syndicate to consider the claims of bondholders as well as Russia's claims for indemnity, and the retrocession of but the small strip of Bessarabia inhabited by Russians.

AN EXAGGERATED VIEW.

The Agence Russe observes that the corrsspondent somewhat exaggerates them, and, above all, was too specific. "The Imperial Cabinet," it says, "has shown that it is actuated by a conciliatory disposition, provided the object of the war is attained. Count Schouvaloff will probably arrive here on Sunday."

PRINCE BISMARCK'S SUCCESSOR.

Count Von Bulow, German Secretary of State for the Foreign Office, is gazetted in Berlin as official substitute for Prince Bismarck in the Department of Foreign Affairs, Admiral Von Stosch in matters connected with the Navy, and Dr. Stephan in the administration of Posts and Telegraphs.

AUSTRIA'S POSITION.

The Austrian Embassy at Constantinople denies that Austrian troops are concentrating on the Bosnian frontier. It is declared that Austria will not occupy Bosnia without the consent of the Porte.

A MONTENEGRIN SHOOTS AN AUSTRIAN.

An Austrian sentinel has been shot near Cattaro by a Montenegrin.

SERVIAN PRECAUTIONS.

The Servians have established a strong military post at Kustendil, on the Mitrovitza and Salonica Railway. Nine thousand Mohammedan Arnauts, posted on the mountains, impede communication with Old Servia by the frequent raids they make, and commit great atrocities in the Servian villages. A force will be immediately sent against them.

A HEAVY DEBT.

A Russian correspondent writes from Cracow tha the Russian government is said to owe the company victualling the army 20,000,000 roubles ($16,000,000.) The company must suspend unless paid immediately.

MACEDON ACCEPTS PEACE.

A telegram from Athens reports that the British Consuls have induced the insurgent leaders in Macedonia to accept the same terms as the Thessalians. The volunteers will retain their arms and return to Greece on board a British man-of-war, or by land. The native insurgents will retain their arms and return to their homes.

NERO FIDDLED WHILE ROME BURNED.

As evidence that nothing stirring is likely to occur for a few days the correspondent at Vienna of the Times says that Count Andrassy has left for Styria on a shooting excursion.

A GREAT FIRE IN MANCHESTER.

An extensive fire is now raging in Manchester. Two large timber yards and nine or ten houses have already been destroyed. The flames were not subdued until late at night owing to a want of water. It seems to have been the work of an incendiary. The loss is $250,000.

SMALLPOX IN LONDON.

The committees of the smallpox asylums report that the disease is epidemic here as strong as it was a year ago, there now being 850 cases.

FIRST WEEK OF THE PARIS EXHIBITION.

Eighty thousand persons visited the Exhibition on Sunday.

THE TUILERIES TO BE REBUILT.

The Tuileries Commission has resolved to recommend the restoration of that ruined palace, at a cost of about four million francs, and the appropriation of it to a museum of modern art. The Chambers will be asked to sanction the scheme.

REPUBLICANISM STILL POPULAR.

Supplemental elections held in France on Sunday, for members of the Chamber of Deputies, caused by invalidations of previous elections, resulted in the return of six republicans and two conservatives.

GERMANY AND THE VATICAN.

A special despatch to the Times from Berlin says:—"Contrary to the expectations raised by the recent conciliatory attitude of the Papacy those Prussian priests in receipt of government stipends have been asked by Cardinal Caterini, Prefect of the Congregation of the Sacred Council, either to renounce their salaries or to declare their opposition to the Ecclesiastical May laws."

SOME STRIKERS SURRENDER.

The operatives at Burnley and Padiham have formally offered to return to work at a reduction of wages coupled with short time. No arrangement, however, has been arrived at.

SIX THOUSAND MORE.

From six to seven thousand cloth workers in the Holmfirth district and Huddersfield resolved to strike in consequence of notice of a reduction of wages.

ALL DO NOT YIELD.

Some of the Burmley masters have peremptorily refused the offer of the operatives to work at reduced wages with short time.

NO COMPROMISE.

A meeting of delegates at Blackburn, on Sunday, unanimously rejected the idea of offering further compromise to the masters.

RUSSIA IN AMERICAN WATERS.

ONLY ONE SUSPICIOUS VESSEL AT SAN FRANCISCO—A RUSSIAN GUNBOAT WAITING FOR THE SIGNAL.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

SAN FRANCISCO, May 6, 1878.

There is nothing in the rumor that Russian privateers are fitting out here. There are no vessels in port that could be used for that purpose, not including the Occidental or Pacific mail steamers, except the steamer yacht Sofia, recently from Peru, the property of Captain Mulloy, of New York. She is a suspicious looking craft and is lingering in the bay in a mysterious manner. She could go into commission at once and would be dangerous to commerce.

RUSSIA'S ASIATIC FLEET.

The Russian fleet which has been at Vladisnostock, on the Russian Asiatic coast, all winter, is composed of the Bayahn, Vsadnik, Abek, Toungouss, Ermak, Vostok, Gaydemark, Yaponitz and Gormoston. The Russian gunboat Graysser is detained here to carry the news to that fleet of the declaration of war between England and Russia should it take place.

CANADA'S DANGER.

THE FENIAN INVASION NO IDLE TALK—THOUSANDS OF MEN DRILLING FOR IT—NO REPETITION OF 1866.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

BUFFALO, May 6, 1878.

The telegram from this city published in the HERALD relative to the contemplated Fenian invasion of Canada in the event of a war between England and Russia has created considerable sensation here. Many discredit any such Quixotic scheme, but in an interview with some of the leading Irish residents here the fact has been ascertained beyond a doubt that such an invasion will be attempted, and also that there are a large number of men drilling nightly in various localities in this city and in other cities, and that when the time comes for action there will be a force fully competent to strike a decided blow, well armed and equipped with the most improved weapons of warfare.

EIGHTY TO NINETY THOUSAND MEN DRILLING.

It is their design to prevent a repetition of the abortive invasion of 1866, and the attempt will not therefore be made until everything is in readiness for success. Some estimate the force actually drilling throughout the country at from eighty to ninety thousand men.

One of the most influential Irishmen in this city states that it is the intention of Irishmen, in the event of war between England and Russia, to prevent Canada from contributing any aid to England. Force of arms would be resorted to to prevent this.

A NEW FENIAN ORGANIZATION.

A new company has lately been formed here. Their arms and equipments are to be shipped from New York.

TUG STEAMERS FOR THE AMAZON.

PHILADELPHIA, May 6, 1878.

The tug steamers Juno and Brazil, concerning which rumor had it that they were to be used for privateering purposes, sailed to-day for the Amazon, South America, to do duty on that river.

VINELAND RAILROAD COMPANY.

PHILADELPHIA, May 6, 1878.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Vineland Railroad Company, of New Jersey, held this morning, the following directors were chosen for the ensuing year:—Jay Gould, Thomas I. Sheridan, Thomas G. Rigney, Louis H. Taylor, James P. Mead, Joshua Cowly, James F. Bingham. Jay Gould was elected president, and James F. Bingham secretary and treasurer.

THE LERDO REVOLUTION.

ACTION OF UNITED STATES OFFICERS IN PRESERVATION OF NEUTRALITY.

WASHINGTON, May 6, 1878.

General McDowell has been instructed to institute a vigilant watchfulness along the southern border of Arizona and Southern California to prevent a violation of the neutrality laws by the Lerdo revolutionists and to arrest any and all parties who are suspected of congregating on the border for that purpose. General Ord has notified the War Department that he has made such a distribution of the force under his command as will, in his judgment, with the co-operation of other federal officers and the State officials, prevent any serious violation of the neutrality laws. He has directed the prompt arrest of all suspected persons who may attempt to cross from the United States into Mexico. His action has been approved at the headquarters in this city.

OUTBREAK IN CHIHUAHUA.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, May 6, 1878.

Advices from the State of Chihuahua are to the effect that on the 16th ult. an attempt to arrest Governor Trias, the Diaz incumbent, was suppressed. Fifteen of the conspirators were arrested.

ELECTION RIOT.

FIGHT ON THE COLOR LINE AT A NORTH CAROLINA POLL—TWO MEN SHOT, ONE FATALLY.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

WELDON, May 6, 1878.

The election for town officials here to-day was inaugurated by a riot. The democrats, who had been successful for the past two years, offered to compromise with the republicans by putting the names of L. F. Larkin (rep.), sheriff, and John M. Foote (rep.), postmaster, on their ticket for town commissioners. This was indignantly refused by the republicans, and both parties nominated straightout tickets. This morning when the polls had been opened and after six votes had been deposited a negro boy named John Purnell presented himself to vote. His vote was challenged and refused. Bill Hill, a negro poll holder and lately a magistrate, at once began a quarrel with T. L. Emery, a white man. John Ward, another negro, joined in the quarrel and called Emery a liar. Emery very promptly knocked him down, and Ward then drew a long shoe knife and advanced upon Emery, but he was caught and disarmed. Just then the negro boy Purnell, about whose vote the row commenced, made an attack on Emery with a chair. This at once renewed the row. J. S. Evans, a justice of the peace, jumped upon a table and tried to quell the disturbance by virtue of his office. He was in a degree successful, and the negro (Purnell) was put out of the room. He at once went under the railroad shed and began cursing Emery and others in the foulest manner.

TWO MEN SHOT.

No officer being at hand, the Mayor ordered Captain Emery and Captain R. J. Day to arrest him. When Emery took hold of him to carry him to the lockup, Purnell broke away and struck Emery on the head with the butt end of a billiard cue, which some one in the crowd handed him. A large crowd of both parties immediately rushed into the fight, and several pistol shots were fired. Purnell was shot through the right lung and in the mouth, and Alexander Burnett through the arm. The confusion was so great and so many shots were fired by both parties that it is impossible to tell who fired the effective shots. Purnell will die. Burnett is only slightly wounded. Several others were injured by slight cuts and bruises from knives and clubs.

THREATS FROM COLORED DESPERADOES.

It is thought that there will be no further trouble, although the negroes have made threats to burn the town, and Hill, the negro before mentioned, has said that seventy-five men have been sworn to revenge Purnell's death before the sun rises to-morrow morning. The white people are, however, prepared to check any demonstration in its incipiency.

THE ELECTION TO BE CONTESTED.

The election closed without further disturbance. The republicans claim the election, but the democrats will contest it on the ground of riot and fraud. Upon counting the vote twenty-three more ballots were found in the box than the registration list called for, there being only 215 registered voters, and 238 ballots were counted. The negroes still retain their clubs and threaten to avenge the shooting of Purnell.

RAID ON CROOKED WHISKEY.

ARREST OF EIGHT MEN CHARGED WITH ILLICIT DISTILLATION IN VIRGINIA.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

HARRISONBURG, Va., May 6, 1878.

An important and extensive raid against illicit distillers in the Sixth district, in the mountains of Madison county, Va., was recently organized by the Collector of Internal Revenue at this place, and promptly and vigorously executed by some determined and brave men detailed for this perilous service. The raiding party was in charge of Lieutenant Donovan, assisted by the Deputy United States Marshal and Storekeepers and Gaugers James H. Beemer, Thomas R. Campbell, James R. O'Neal, Captain A. Vonkliser, Deputy Collector A. M. Lawson, of Albemarle county, and Joseph Smith, Sheriff of Greene county were in the party. They captured the following persons charged with illicit distilling:—James M. Nichols, William Berry, Silas Weakley, Henry Utz, Champ Dodson, Oscar McCalister, Silas Berry and Stewart Yowell, all of Madison county. The two last named escaped after their capture. They had warrants also for Albert Woodward, A. M. Yowell and Pleasant Jenkins, of the same county. Four illicit distilleries, some of which were in operation, were found and destroyed, on what is called Ragged Mountain, near the dividing line between Madison and Rappahannock counties.

The prisoners were brought before United States Commissioner William J. Points, here for examination this evening, but the cases were deferred till to-morrow, to await the arrival of government witnesses. This will be an important and exciting addition to the business of the United States District Court of Western Virginia, which will commence its session here to-morrow. At this session of Court ex-Senator John F. Lewis will qualify as marshal of this district. The business of the Court has largely increased in consequence of the failure of Judge Rives to hold a session in October last.

CINCINNATI'S WHISKEY RING.

CHARGES REFLECTING UPON REVENUE COLLECTOR WEITZEL—HE MAKES A FIGHT AGAINST SECRETARY SHERMAN.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

CINCINNATI, May 6, 1878.

Telegrams from Washington, published in the Gazette to-day, charged that the Revenue Department was in possession of facts, and had been for months past, showing a formidable whiskey ring in existence in Cincinnati, by means of which the government was being swindled out of a large amount of revenue in this district. This was given as the reason of Secretary Sherman's attempted removal of Colonel Lewis Weitzel from the office of Revenue Collector. Weitzel it seems had concluded to end the controversy over his holding the office any longer, and had prepared a letter of resignation, intending to forward it to-day. On reading these reports reflecting upon his management of the office he determined not to resign, but to make a fight against removal. The Enquirer of to-morrow publishes an interview with Weitzel, in which, among other things, he says:—"If Mr. Sherman knew of any frauds being committed in my office and failed to prosecute the guilty parties or even to investigate them, he was as guilty as the men who committed them. I shall not shield myself behind subordinates, because I am responsible for them. Neither will I be pushed out of a place I have held for eight years under charges that are not examined."

Weitzel is a plucky man and he will make a determined fight for his position before giving it up.

EDUCATION OF COLORED CHILDREN.

MARYLAND AFRICAN METHODISTS DEMAND COLORED TEACHERS FOR THEIR SCHOOLS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

BALTIMORE, May 6, 1878.

At to-day's session of the Baltimore Annual Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church a series of resolutions in reference to the education of colored pupils in the public schools was read and referred to the Educational Committee. They recite, among other things, that

Whereas it is a truism that those of the same family, tribe, nationality and race, other things being equal, are the best instructors, teachers and models for their respective family, tribe, nation and race, and why not in the Maryland public schools (as the powers that be will have separate schools) allow colored teachers to teach colored children? and whereas we, the colored citizens of Maryland, are denied in the city of Baltimore the common right and privilege of teaching our own children in the public schools set apart by the Public School Commissioners of this city, therefore be it

Resolved, That, as citizens and ministers of a common salvation, we denounce this denial and refusal on the part of the Commissioner as an outrage against the constitution, bill of rights and the rights of a part of their loyal and patriotic fellow citizens.

Resolved, That we, ministers and citizens, will work in all honorable ways to have the foul blot removed from the otherwise fair fame of our city.

The resolutions will, it is thought, be adopted unanimously.

CONFESSION OF WIFE MURDER.

PITTSTON, Pa., May 6, 1878.

Thomas Morris, who was arrested here a few days since, has confessed to murdering his wife at Kansas City last January, and was taken to that place this morning.

LABOR VS. CAPITAL

Threatening Attitude of Striking Coal Miners in Southern Illinois.

COMMUNISTIC COUNSELS.

The Exactions of the Mine Bosses To Be Resisted at All Hazards.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

BELLEVILLE, Ills., May 6, 1878.

Serious apprehensions are felt that the trouble in the coal mines of this neighborhood, where nearly four thousand miners are on a strike, will end in scenes of violence, and this feeling has been greatly aggravated by the discovery that communistic agents from St. Louis have been out among the miners, counselling them to remain firm and enforce their rights. The strike has been in operation a little over three weeks and extends to all the pits in St. Clair and Madison counties. The strike originated in a demand for increased pay, or, as the men say, "for living wages." The coal operators have been paying the men from one cent to one and a half cents per bushel, and at this rate the miners assert they cannot live. Fair, ordinary miners should be able to dig sixty-five bushels of coal per day, but out of their earnings they have to find oil for their lamps, supply themselves with tools and keep them sharpened and buy powder. Then they charge that there was another imposition practised on them in measuring their work by the box. The box should hold sixteen bushels, but they say they were compelled to so pile it up with coal that it contained eighteen or twenty bushels, and for these extra bushels they received no recompense. The proper way for the men to be paid, they claim, is according to the freight receipts, and then they would get their money for all they did.

TERMS DEMANDED.

The men are now sticking out for two and a half or two cents a bushel, and are determined to make a compact with the bosses for six or twelve months, during which period no alteration is to be made from the rate of pay agreed upon. The coal operators, however, stand quite aloof from the strikers, will not meet them and refuse to make any attempt at a compromise. This embitters the feeling of the miners toward the bosses, and there is an evident determination to hold out to the last.

VIOLENT HOSTILE DEMONSTRATIONS.

Until last week the miners maintained a peaceful attitude, but hearing that some men were laying tracks in Hendricks' mine, they went over there and threw 600 cords of wood which had been lying in the vicinity of the pit down the shaft. They also demolished an engine house attached to the Dudley mines, and it was in connection with these excesses that two of the strikers were locked up, although they strenuously deny any complicity in the riotous proceedings.

TO STARVE OR STEAL.

Another thing that causes a bitter feeling on the part of the men is the shipping of coal by the railroad companies. The miners have been idle so long that many are menaced by starvation, making them desperate and disposed to violence. A large number of them have thus far been sustained by the storekeepers, but they now decline to make further advances. To a reporter who visited the leaders this morning they said "there will be no trouble. A man must live. He won't see his wife and children starve and plenty around. If the worst comes to the worst we will have to take it." "Yes," interjected another, "we have only been earning starvation wages and we don't mean to put up with it. We want our rights and hope to get them peaceably, but when it comes to starving or stealing, why I for one would steal."

COUNSELS OF COMMUNISTIC AGITATORS.

The strikers are composed of about one-half German and one-half English. The St. Louis socialistic party is in full rapport with the Belleville strikers, and on last Sunday Albert Currlin, the Communist leader, addressed a large party of workingmen in the City Park. A small sheet, called the Reform, published both in German and English, circulates widely among the workingmen. There is no doubt that the Communistic organizations of St. Louis are in full sympathy with the strikers and are doing all they can to encourage the miners in their threatening attitude. For the present peaceful counsels have sway with the majority, but at any moment the hot blood of the coal diggers may cause trouble. This morning, at nine o'clock, delegates from all the unions met in council at Hull's Gardens, to determine upon their further course of action, but the result of the meeting has not been made public. The leaders are well supported by the men, who seem to have every confidence in them. When questioned on various points the men would invariably respond that their leaders must be seen—only they could speak with any authority.

COMMUNISTS EXERCISING UNDER ARMS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

ST. LOUIS, May 6, 1878.

Positive information was obtained to-day that the Communists had been drilling at a large hall and tenpin alley kept by Fr. Seidkamp, on Bremen avenue and Fifteenth street. The intelligence was also received that the Communists who meet at the abovementioned rendezvous number fully 120 men. They are well accoutred and have breech-loading guns of the latest patent. Their operations have been conducted so secretly that few residents of the neighborhood know anything about what they have done. They are all determined men, with good leaders, and in the event of an uprising of the masses of workingmen would play an important part. Most of the men who have joined the Communistic ranks, with those who meet at Seidkamp's Hall, are German workingmen.

DESERTING SITTING BULL.

SURRENDER OF CHIEF GALL, WITH ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY BRAVES.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

BISMARCK, D. T., May 6, 1878.

Lieutenant Charles F. Roe, of Fort Custer, arrived here to-day in a "Mackinaw," ten days from Fort Keogh. He reports the surrender of Chief Gall and 150 warriors from Sitting Bull's camp to Lieutenant Baldwin and command on Poplar River. Gall was one of the worst of the hostile leaders. He has been terribly bitter toward the whites, and his surrender is regarded by General Miles as an important victory.

Fort Peck has been abandoned, and the troops who were there have marched to Forts Keogh and Buford.

THE CAMERON-SHERMAN NUPTIALS.

ARRIVAL OF THE HAPPY SENATOR AT THE BRIDE'S RESIDENCE.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE HERALD.]

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 6, 1878.

Senator James Donald Cameron arrived at seven o'clock this evening from Washington by way of Pittsburg. After supper at the Kennard House he at once proceeded to the residence of his fiancée, Miss Lizzie Sherman, on Case avenue. The Senator came earlier than had been expected and was unaccompanied by friends. To-morrow evening the distinguished guests from abroad will begin to arrive, and it is thought Generals Sheridan and Forsyth may be here and enjoy with General Sherman, Secretary Sherman, ex-Senator Simon Cameron and others the honors of the grand reception to be tendered by the business men of the city and the Fifteenth regiment Ohio National Guard, at the Kennard House, on Wednesday. A number of leading members of the Ohio Legislature will participate in this reception, which promises to be a grand affair, considering that there is no extensive set programme.

Some valuable wedding gifts have already been received from abroad by Mrs. Judge Sherman. Further letters of regret from personages at Washington unable to be present have also arrived.

ARREST OF SAFE ROBBERS.

BOSTON, Mass., May 6, 1878.

The police have arrested Herbert W. Otis, Charles Doherty, William Ryan, alias William H. Ryman, alias Mysterious Billy; John F. Conners, alias Jack Conners; Charles H. Gilman and Jennie Walton, charged with complicity in removing a safe from the house of Ephraim Otis in South Scituate last Monday night and robbing it of $30,000 in bonds. Herbert W. Otis is a nephew of the man robbed and a member of the firm of Merrick Billings & Otis, druggists, in Boston, which lately failed. Otis, it is supposed, concocted the whole plan of the robbery. The entire property was recovered.

WALL STREET,
MONDAY, May 6—6 P. M.

Thoroughly dull and uneventful to-day falls into place with Friday and Saturday of last week, being a perfect match in matter of dreariness, dulness and general absence of all exciting topics. The best that can be said of it is that the small traders were disposed to be a little more active (after the Sunday's rest) in their scramble for infinitesimal profits, and that the large operators, while keeping their hands off of any decided movement, seem to agree that a strong and steady catalogue of prices shall be maintained. This is particularly referable to the Northwestern and St. Paul stocks, the former being steadied under the single and double privileges of Mr. Gould, and the latter held firmly under the anticipation that regular dividends will be established upon both classes of stock at the annual meeting, to be held next month. In fact, the same hopes are entertained with regard to the Northwest shares, even by parties who are loudest in denunciation of Mr. Gould and who profess to believe that the passage of the control of the road into his hands means nothing less than an unmitigated smash. A month, however, is a long time in the history of Wall street, and it will be extraordinary if half a dozen schemes are not set afoot to break up speculation in the grangers before the days fixed for the annual meetings occur. Beyond the usual amount of thimble-rigging in Lake Shore (which is meaningless if taken to indicate a popular estimation of its value), but little attention was paid to the favorite. Pretty much everything that could be said to the detriment of the property has already been said, and on the other hand there appears to be nothing particularly cheerful to be advanced in its favor. Consequently the traders familiar to its precincts stand idle and look glum, and are forced, Micawber like, to wait for something to turn up. A sharp advance during the last half hour in Delaware and Lackawanna partially relieved the prevailing monotony, but it possessed no more significance than usually attaches to the financial flip-flaps with which the street is so familiar. To sum up, business to-day has been solely that of a broker's market, affecting no prominent interests, meaning nothing, and of as little moment as though it had never been transacted.

The opening prices of stocks at the Board to-day were as follows:—Erie, 11⅜; Lake Shore, 62⅜; Wabash, 15; Northwestern, 51⅛; do. preferred, 72; Rock Island, 105⅛; Milwaukee and St. Paul, 50⅞; do. preferred, 74⅛; Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 52⅞; New Jersey Central, 17⅛; Delaware and Hudson Canal, 53; Morris and Essex, 79; Michigan Central, 71; Illinois Central, 76⅛; Union Pacific, 69⅛; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, 102⅛; Chicago and Alton, 72⅛; C., C. and I. JUDGE ROBINSON ILL.

In the midst of a tedious argument in the Common Pleas, General Term, yesterday, Judge Robinson, who, together with Judges Daly and Larremore, was presiding in that court, suddenly dropped from his chair in a fit of vertigo. He was at once borne from the court room and medical aid sought. The unexpected event caused a great commotion in the court room and it was some time before the business of the day was resumed.

THE COURTS.

Superior Court, General Term, Decisions.

THE GOULD HOMICIDE.

Liability of Trustees of Savings Banks.

The General Term of the Superior Court yesterday rendered a number of decisions on appeals argued during the last term. Among others of importance was one in the suit of Rose McDonald, who, as administratrix of her husband, brought a suit against Charles H. Mallory and others, owners of the ill-fated City of Waco. The plaintiff, in her complaint, states that the defendants, in violation of section 4,472 of the United States Revised Statutes, loaded the steamer with 300 cases of crude petroleum. When the vessel reached the Gulf of Mexico a fire broke out, and, the petroleum finally becoming ignited, the vessel was completely destroyed and all on board, including her husband, who was employed as fireman, were lost. She charges that the fire was the result of defendants' negligence, and brought this suit to recover $10,000 damages. The defendants demurred to the complaint on the ground that sufficient facts were not stated to constitute a cause of action, and the demurrer was sustained on the ground that the statute referred to had no operation on a vessel on the high seas. From this judgment an appeal was taken, and the General Term, Judge Sedgwick writing the opinion, affirms the order of the Court below.

A decision of some importance was also rendered by the Court in the case of the Sun Printing and Publishing Association against the Tribune Association. It would seem that the plaintiff allowed employés of the defendant, who were excavating the adjoining premises, to enter the Sun Building in order to enable them to obtain convenient access to the wall for the purpose of shoring it up and supporting it by proper foundations. Then it was found that in order to do the work it would be necessary to temporarily remove certain machinery belonging to the Sun. This was done at the request of the officers of the Tribune Association at an expense to the Sun Association of about $500. The Tribune Association having refused to pay this sum judgment was recovered for the amount in the Superior Court. The Tribune officials appealed, claiming that the license to enter on the premises for the purpose of supporting the wall was incomplete without the removal of the machinery, and that therefore plaintiff should remove it at its own expense. The General Term yesterday affirmed the judgment, Judge Sanford giving the opinion, holding that the evidence would have warranted a larger recovery. William Bartlett appeared for plaintiff and C. A. Runkle for defendant.

TRIAL OF "CALIFORNIA GEORGE."

Part 2 of the Court of General Sessions was crowded yesterday by an attentive throng, the occasion being the trial before Judge Gildersleeve of George Weyman, alias California George, for the killing of William J. Gould in the saloon of John Opp, No. 311 Bowery, on the morning of the 2d of January last. The prosecution was represented by Assistant District Attorney Herring, the prisoner being defended by John R. Fellows and ex-Judge Koch. Coroner Woltman, who took the ante-mortem statement of the deceased, and Deputy Coroner Cushman, who made the autopsy, were the first witnesses examined. Webster Lebeauveau testified that he was with the deceased on the night in question; he had been selling tickets at the Theatre Comique and after making some calls they visited Opp's; it was the occasion of Gould's birthday and he invited several friends to drink; they all sat down at a table; shortly afterward the prisoner came in and with his friends joined the party; the conversation turned on the subject of wrestling; Opp remarked that there was a man named Brady who could throw Gould, the latter urging, however, that he himself could throw any man on the Bowery; Weyman began to "chaff" Gould, telling him he could not wrestle at all and that he (Weyman) had a five-year-old boy who could throw him; Gould retorted that he could throw Weyman and the boy together, at the same time taking hold of the lapel of Weyman's coat; Weyman rose and both men moved toward the bar; there were no angry words spoken; almost immediately Gould staggered back, exclaiming that he had been cut; Weyman left the saloon, but was followed and arrested; on the way back to the saloon the prisoner threw away the knife; witness called the officer's attention to it and he picked it up. Wallace Hennion corroborated the statement of the previous witness to the effect that there had been no quarrel before the stabbing took place and that he took the knife from Weyman's hand. John Opp also testified as to the occurrence, stating that when he endeavored to separate the men he slipped on the floor and fell. Officer Leary was also examined and stated that he arrested Weyman at the instance of Lebeauveau, but on taking the prisoner back to the saloon the parties there all denied that any stabbing had taken place. The officer further stated that the witness Lebeauveau had not called his attention to the fact that the prisoner had thrown away any knife. For the defence James McHenry, the barkeeper of the saloon, testified that when Gould and Weyman stood up the latter endeavored to get away, but could not, as Gould followed and held him. Dr. Bernard Steinhardt, who happened to be in the saloon prior to going home, testified that he heard the deceased apply certain epithets to the prisoner. It is contended on the part of the defence that Gould was the aggressor, and that, under the circumstances, the prisoner was justified in using a knife. The trial will be resumed to-day.

THIRD AVENUE SAVINGS BANK.

Samuel H. Hurd, receiver of the Third Avenue Savings Bank, brought suits recently against the trustees of the bank to recover the sums for which they gave their respective bonds to be used as the assets of the bank in the statement to the Bank Department and thus give to the bank an exhibit of solvency. These various suits were tried before Judge Van Brunt, in Supreme Court, Circuit, and resulted in each case in a judgment for the receiver, such judgments aggregating some $415,000. A motion was made for a new trial, and on this motion a decision was given yesterday by Judge Van Brunt, the same being embodied in a lengthy opinion. He discusses at first the question of ultra views, and after holding, from copious authorities cited, that such defence cannot be set up in these suits, he decides that the defendants are clearly liable for the amount of their various bonds, and refuses to grant a new trial.

A VERMONT MARBLE QUARRY.

Before Judge Van Vorst, holding Supreme Court, Circuit, there was begun yesterday the trial of a suit brought by Algernon S. Baxter against the Rensselaer and Saratoga Railroad Company. In 1864 the Rutland and Washington and the Rensselaer and Saratoga were competing railroads. Mr. Baxter was superintendent of one of the marble mills at Rutland, and Mr. Jay Gould, as managing trustee under a mortgage of the Rutland and Washington, induced him, as he alleges, to build a mill at Salem, to be run by water power, and gave him a written contract not to charge any freightage for conveying marble from the quarry to the mill. He says he expended $50,000 on the mill, and all went smoothly until the railroad was sold under foreclosure and bought in by the trustees, and a new company formed in 1865 called the Troy, Salem and Rutland Railroad Company. This company renewed the contract for the remainder of the ten years to plaintiff and then leased the line to the Rensselaer and Saratoga, thus terminating competition. Mr. Baxter claims, under the lease, that defendants accepted the obligations of the contract. He says he was compelled by defendants to pay $1 50 a ton until he paid $5,000, when the business became unprofitable, and he now claims $100,000 damages. The answer admits the contract, but denies any liability. The main question at issue is whether the defendants, acquiring title under foreclosure, can be held to have assumed the contract. Messrs. Chittenden and Bullard appear for the plaintiff, and ex-Judge Porter and E. F. Bullard, of Troy, for the defendants.

DIVORCE BULLETIN.

Additional suits for divorce were yesterday brought to the notice of the courts. First in the list, although pending in the court for some time, the papers in the suit for annulment of marriage, brought by Adelaide Pattison against John N. Pattison, were submitted to Judge Donohue. Mrs. Pattison claims that when she married Mr. Pattison he had a wife living; that the first marriage took place in Pennsylvania; that after this first marriage Mr. Pattison and Mrs. Pattison No. 1 lived for about a year in this city when they quarrelled, when Mrs. Pattison No. 1 left him and returned to Pennsylvania, where she obtained a divorce from him, which was followed by his obtaining in this State a divorce from her. Mrs. Pattison No. 2 insists that there was no personal service of process in either case, and that both decrees are absolutely void for want of jurisdiction. The matter was referred to ex-Judge Barbour, who reported in favor of annulling the second marriage. Mr. A. A. Redfield appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. J. K. Hazard for the defendant.

A suit for divorce has been brought by Annie Freidman against Mendel Freidman. The parties have not yet been four years married. She complains that he abused her most cruelly, beating her, knocking her down and choking her, and winding up his brutality by abandoning her in February last and leaving her entirely destitute. The motion came before Judge Donohue in Supreme Court, Chambers, on a motion for alimony and counsel fee, Mr. N. S. Levy appearing for the wife, and Colonel Spencer for the husband. The latter denies his wife's accusations and says there is not a word of truth in them. Judge Donohue took the papers for examination.

Henrietta Ritchie says that in September, 1859, she was married to Carl Ritchie, in Germany; that three years later they came to this country, and that shortly after their arrival he deserted her, since which time she has received no information as to his whereabouts. She now brings suit for divorce, and Judge Donohue yesterday granted an order directing service of the summons by publication.

In the suit for divorce brought by John Callahan against Lizzie Callahan Judge Lawrence yesterday refused to grant a decree, holding that where there is a doubt as to the service of a process on the defendant such doubt should be removed. He referred the matter to Robert Dodge to take evidence on this point.

Alice A. Little has brought a suit for divorce against her husband, Anthony J. Little, the charge being adultery. The parties were married in June, 1873. Judge Donohue yesterday referred the case to William D. Leary.

SUMMARY OF LAW CASES.

Judge Lawrence yesterday gave his decision refusing to dissolve the injunction in the suit of the Children's Fold against the Rev. Edward Crowley, its late manager.

A suit was some time ago brought by the Metropolitan Gas Company against the city to recover $80,857 65 for gas furnished in 1869 to the city. An order of discontinuance of the suit was yesterday granted by Judge Donohue.

Sarah B. Esler alleges that in crossing Eighth avenue, at Twenty-fourth street, she was run over by a horse ridden by Louis Scheile, trampled upon and so severely injured that she was confined to her bed for several weeks. She has brought suit for $10,000 and the trial was commenced yesterday before Judge Barrett. The defence is a general denial.

Judges Ingalls, Potter and Daniels having been assigned to hold the Supreme Court, General Term, this month, the former two Judges, after waiting two hours for Judge Daniels and the latter not putting in an appearance, opened Court yesterday and occupied the remainder of the day in hearing arguments on appeals from orders. Judge Daniels will probably take his seat on the bench this morning.

Elmore H. Coe, proprietor of the fertilizing factory at Newtown Creek, indicted for maintaining a nuisance, appeared at the District Attorney's office yesterday and gave bail in $500 to appear for trial, his brother, Alfred M. Coe, becoming his bondsman.

James Dunlop recently stole an umbrella from a coupé standing in Fifth avenue, and on being pursued by Robert Tighe and Michael Bowen, turned around and fired three shots at his pursuers, one of the bullets slightly wounding Tighe. Three indictments were found against him, and on pleading guilty to the charge of assault with intent to injure he was yesterday sent by Judge Gildersleeve to the State Prison for five years.

J. N. Stoddard, Jr., and others have brought a suit against H. H. Key and Scribner, Armstrong & Co., presenting some rather singular features. The plaintiffs are a Philadelphia firm which began an "American reprint of the ninth edition of the Encyclopædia Brittanica," Mr. Key being employed as their agent soliciting subscriptions. They charge that Key turned over his subscription list to Scribner, Armstrong & Co., who are publishing a rival reproduction of the same work. The present suit is to prevent the use of this list and compel its return to the plaintiffs. A preliminary injunction was granted and Judge Donohue yesterday denied a motion to recall it.

A GOVERNMENT SALE.

The sale took place yesterday of the tobacco shop and factory of Christian H. Lilientual, of No. 221 Washington street, corner of Barclay. This sale was held under a seizure by United States Marshal Payne to satisfy a judgment obtained in the United States Circuit Court. The original claim of the government was for $130,000, and since an additional judgment for $48,000, including costs, has been obtained. The sale commenced at ten o'clock, and continued throughout the day. There was a small attendance of bidders, and the amount realized, it was expected, would be very much below the amount of the judgment obtained by the government.

ANNIVERSARIES.

Semi-Centennial of the American Seaman's Friend Society.

ITS FOUNDATION AND GROWTH.

The Union Theological Seminary in Its Forty-third Year.

The fiftieth anniversary of the American Seamen's Friend Society was celebrated yesterday at the Broadway Tabernacle with appropriate ceremonies. In the morning the Convention met and listened to a historical sketch of the association and papers on other topics. The afternoon session was occupied by a business meeting, at which the annual report was read and trustees for three years and officers for the coming year were elected. In the evening a public session was held in the body of the church, at which speeches were made by Mr. Stewart L. Woodford, Dr. Howard Crosby, Bishop Fellows and others.

THE MORNING SESSION.

The Convention met at ten A. M. in the lecture room of the Broadway Tabernacle, President Richard P. Buck in the chair. Dr. Steadman opened the proceedings with prayer.

Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Hall, corresponding secretary and treasurer, read a historical sketch of the society from its formation to the present day. Its organization, he said, was mainly due to the efforts of Rev. John Truair, who had been pastor of the Mariners' Church. It was started May 5, 1828, its first president being Mr. Smith Thompson, at that time Secretary of the Navy. During the fifty years the total receipts of the society had been $1,516,986 78, and since the founding of the Sailors' Home in Cherry street, in 1842, 104,306 sailors had been cared for. After the historical sketch the following papers were read:—On "Revivals Among Seamen," by the Rev. Dr. Spurgeon; on "Traits of Character Among Christian Seamen," by the Rev. Dr. Hupper; on "Co-operative Work," by the Rev. Dr. Rockwell, and on "Colporteur Work," by Mr. Pearson. The meeting then adjourned until three P. M.

THE AFTERNOON SESSION.

At the afternoon session the following trustees were re-elected for three years:—Rev. John Spaulding, D. D.; John Dwight, Henry A. Hurlbut, Captain David Gillespie, William Mathews, Captain C. C. Duncan, Frederick Sturgess and the Rev. Erskine N. White, D. D. The Board of Trustees then met and the following officers of the society were elected:—President—Richard P. Buck. Vice Presidents—Captain Nathaniel Briggs, J. D. Vermilye, Alpheus Hardy, of Boston; Rev. Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., D. D.; Rev. John Hall, D. D.; Rear Admiral Melancthon Smith, Rev. Marvin R. Vincent, Rev. W. M. Taylor, D. D., J. W. Stanton, of Stonington, Commodore K. R. Breese, United States Navy, F. T. Frelinghuysen, of Newark; Wm. L. King, of Morristown; Charles H. Dabney, of Philadelphia; Commodore Stephen D. Trenchard, United States Navy; David Olyphant, Edward M. Archibald, J. W. A. Nicholson, Richard W. Thompson and Rev. Matthew Simpson. Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer, Rev. Samuel H. Hall, D. D.; Financial Agent, L. P. Hubbard. Standing Committees—Chaplaincy Committee, Messrs. Spaulding, Loomis and White. Publication Committee, Messrs. Rockwell, Sturgess and Prime. Home Committee, Messrs. Ropes, Mathews, Briggs, Demorest, Knevals, Dunean, Niles and Dollner. Executive and Finance Committee, Messrs. Gray, Elwell, Hurlbut, Dwight, Taft and Brinkerhoff. Auditing Committee, Messrs. Gillespie, Gray and Hardy.

ANNUAL REPORT.

The Secretary then read the fiftieth annual report. It states that the chaplains, missionaries, Bible and tract distributors connected with the society have labored in almost every country on the face of the earth. The number of libraries sent out during the year was 883 on vessels carrying 11,521 men. The Sailors' Home, No. 190 Cherry street, has during the past year accommodated 1,787 boarders. These men temporarily deposited with the Superintendent $17,107, of which amount $7,725 were sent to relatives and friends, $1,935 were placed to their credit in savings banks and the balance returned to the depositors. Relief has frequently been furnished to shipwrecked and destitute seamen. The society has published during the past year 80,000 copies of the Sailors' Magazine, and for gratuitous distribution among seamen, in all, 40,000 copies of the Seamen's Friend and over 300,000 copies of the Life Boat, for the use of Sabbath schools throughout the land. The "Sailor's Text Book" has been largely circulated, and the "Seamen's Hymns" have been supplied upon application. In the year ending April 1, 1878, the receipts of the society into its treasury from all sources (including a small previous balance) have been $85,520 97; expenditures, $84,997 91. The local societies, auxiliary to this, have in the same time raised for the seamen's cause $9,541 23. Since the last annual meeting Mr. James Brown, of New York, and Rev. David Inglis, D. D., vice presidents of the society, have died. Seventy-four persons during the past year, by special donation to that end of $30 each, have been constituted life members of the society.

THE EVENING SESSION.

At the evening session a despatch was read from R. W. Thompson, Secretary of the Navy, expressing his regrets that urgent public business prevented his attendance. An address was delivered by Rev. Mr. Jones, a converted sailor, who was followed by Chancellor Crosby. The remarks of United States District Attorney Woodford, who came next, were listened to with rapt attention. After referring to the various dens, on the river fronts, that by means of a red light win the sailor to his destruction, General Woodford, turning around and looking at the venerable officers of the society, told them that the only way to win sailors to Christ was to extend to them at all times the hand of welcome. "Give the sailor a hearty welcome, and let our Protestantism take hold of the masses, as Catholicism has in this city. I tell you, Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen, that we are surrendering the common classes to infidelity on the one hand and Catholicism on the other, and I think the latter is doing its work well."

UNION THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

The forty-second anniversary of the Union Theological Seminary was held in the evening in the Madison Square Presbyterian Church. Rev. Dr. Adams, president of the seminary, presided. The exercises were opened with singing and prayer, after which addresses were delivered by members of the graduating class, as follows:—Mr. James A. Averill on "The Ultimate Authority in Matters of Religion;" Mr. Charles A. Northrop, on "English Preachers in the Seventeenth Century;" Mr. James F. Riggs, on "Mohammedanism as a Spiritual Power," and Mr. Samuel T. Emerson, on "The Progressive Element in Christian Theology."

Dr. Adams, after a short address, presented diplomas to the following graduates:—

CRUEL CHARGES.

A MOTHER ALLEGES THAT HER DAUGHTER HAS BEEN RUINED, BUT THE COURT THINKS DIFFERENTLY.

A difficult question for adjudication was brought up before Judge Morgan at the Tombs yesterday, as a component part of a simple assault and battery case. The little party of persons interested in the case attracted general attention as they entered, their appearance indicating that they were not of the class whose quarrels were usually settled in a police court, and when the hearing was begun and the story of strong passions and probable misunderstandings was made plain the interest became intense.

The prisoner was Mrs. Frances Jones, a good looking woman of about forty, whose evident agitation was shown by frequent glances of tenderness at one of the party and of hatred at another one. She was charged by Miss Mary E. Sirovich, of Englewood, with assault. The complainant was sworn and told a short, plain story. "I came to New York this morning with this young lady," she said, pointing at a modest looking girl beside her, "and I stopped with her at the place where she works. It's a mustard mill in Duane street. While we were there this woman entered and had some words with my friend and struck me in the face two or three times."

"Judge, it's false," said Mrs. Jones. "I never struck her." She was at once hushed by the officers, and the complainant continued her story, telling how she rebuked the prisoner and was assaulted by her.

THE MOTHER'S COMPLAINT.

Mrs. Jones was asked what she had to say, and stepped to the desk, trembling with an emotion that could hardly have been feigned. "Judge, I'll tell you God's truth," she said earnestly; "I went to this place to get my daughter Laura away, and——"

"Is that your daughter?" asked the Judge, pointing to the young girl.

"Yes; she works at the place for that man yonder, Mr. Charles Norman," and she pointed to the last member of the party, a respectable looking gentleman about thirty-five years old. "Judge, he is a bad man, and he has led my daughter astray."

"Oh!" said the daughter, with a sort of shuddering half sob.

"It's true, Judge," continued the prisoner. "She owned it all to me last Saturday. She owned it to me, her mother, and I wanted her to leave him, but she wouldn't; and I went there again to-day to try to get her away. This woman came between us, and I did threaten her with a potato masher I had with me, but I didn't strike her, Judge, and I was so agitated I hardly knew what I was doing."

"And do you really mean to say that that man has ruined your daughter?" asked the Judge.

"It's a terrible thing, Judge, but it's true."

"It is not!" said the girl, bursting in tears. She had looked at her mother in a sort of stupor of amazement till she could keep quiet no longer.

"It is. You told me so last Saturday," said the mother, also weeping.

"I never did," sobbed the girl. "How can you say such a thing?"

"Step here," said the Judge, "and tell me about this."

"Judge," said the girl, "I have worked out for a long time and I had to give my mother every cent of my wages, so that I couldn't get myself a stitch of clothing, for she spends it all for herself. Only the other day she got $25 from Mr. Norman—three months of my wages. She was to get me some clothes with it, but she didn't, and she wanted more money, and that made the trouble."

"It is not the money, Laura," interrupted her mother; "you know it isn't. The money is nothing."

"Is this true that your mother says about you?" said the Judge.

"No," said the girl, indignantly.

EFFECTIVELY DENIED.

Mr. Norman corroborated the girl's story fully, saying that she worked for him at his mill and lived in his family at Englewood, N. J. So far as he knew she was a good girl and his wife was greatly interested in her and had made her a number of presents of necessary clothing, of which she was destitute. He also denied the mother's story indignantly and said that he had prepared an affidavit in the case which he proposed presenting to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, as the girl was only fifteen years old. He also explained Miss Sirovich's presence by saying that she was his wife's sister.

"Mrs. Jones," said the Judge, "if you wanted to get your daughter away you went to work the wrong way to do it."

"I know I did, Judge," said she; "but it is terrible to think of. She was a good, pure girl, and that man has ruined her. It is done now, but I want to take her away, and I want to get a warrant for his arrest. Won't you give me one?"

"No," said the Judge. "I believe you are wrong about the girl. I do not believe this man has harmed her, and you acted very wrongly in this matter."

Mrs. Jones was committed for five days, but is to be liberated this morning.

COUNTERFEIT NOTES.

A $100 counterfeit note on the Merchants' National Bank, New Bedford, Mass., has been put in circulation. The following discrepancies between it and the genuine are noticeable:—In the counterfeit the lower part of the letter "S" in the signature of "S. B. Colby, Register of the Treasury," comes over the letter "M" in the word "Massachusetts," while in the genuine it comes over the first letter "s" in the word "Massachusetts." In the genuine note the lower part of the letter "p" in the signature of "F. E. Spinner, Treasurer of the United States," locks with the upper part of the letter "F" in the word "February," while in the counterfeit the letters do not touch.

SWORN IN AS MAYOR.

Henry J. Hooper was sworn in, yesterday, as Mayor of Jersey City.
